Neutrals Forecast Drastic Purge of German Command as Hitler Takes Over.

SERIOUS SPLIT SEEN

Fuehrer Believed Ready For Thrust at Turkey or African Front.

(By United Press)

LONDON—Allied governments watched for signs of a desperate German offensive on a new front today, and neutral dispatches forecast a drastic new purge of the German high command, as the result of Adolf Hitler's assumption of direct command of the German armies.

Usually well informed quarters here could only guess—as could Germans—what lay behind Hitler's dismissal of his close confidant, Field Marshal Walter Von Brauchitsch as commander in chief of the army.

It was suggested that there had been a serious split between Hitler and the entire high command; that Brauchitsch's long reported enmity for Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop had reached its climax; that Hitler actually feared an invasion of Germany by the Russian armies unless he made a supreme effort himself to stop the German rout on the eastern front.

There were many who believed that Hitler intended to strike through Turkey at the Russian Caucasus. There were more who foresaw the possibility of an imminent attack on the African front through Spain and French North Africa.

The one thing on which everyone agreed—apparently including Hitler himself — was that the change in the high command was due to the beating which the Germans were taking on the Russian front, and to the grim outlook for the German armies there during the winter months.

Developments which fitted into the general German picture were.

Industry-Labor Group Still Deadlocked on Closed Shop.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— President Roosevelt's industry-labor conference meets again in joint session today to try to break a deadlock over the closed shop issue.

There were indications that the president might be asked to intervene if today's efforts to reach a no-strike agreement fail. Mr. Roosevelt was believed ready to give congress a go-ahead signal on anti-strike legislation if the conference collapses.

The conference recessed Friday when neither management nor labor representatives would budge from their positions on the closed shop. Union representatives demanded that any board set up to administer a voluntary labor agreement during the war be given authority to consider union requests for closed shop agreements. The industrial representatives insisted that closed shop demands be restricted to direct negotiations between the union and employer.

Hitler Ousts Him

Well informed quarters are at loss to know just what lay behind Hitler's dismissal of Field Marshal Walter von Brauchitsch (above) as commander in chief of the army. Hitler, who took command himself, said it was intuition that made him act. Other observers felt it was the defeat of Nazi armies in Russia.

Takes Preliminary Steps In Joint Planning For Fight on Axis.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—In conferences with the Russian, Chinese and Netherlands envoys to the United States, President Roosevelt today took preliminary steps in "joint planning for unity of action," by the countries combattinf the Axis.

The chief executive scheduled talks separately with Maxim Litvinoff, the Russian ambassador; Dr. Huh Shih, the Chinese ambassador, and A. Loudon, the Netherlands minister.

He saw Lord Halifax, the British ambassador, yesterday.

The White House said that all these conferences were in line with an announcement Saturday night that Britain and the United States already had taken steps toward coordination of the war effort and that the joint planning for unity of action would be extended to Russia, China, the Netherlands and other governments engaged in the common cause of defeating the Axis.

Shephen Early, presidential secretary, remarked of today's conferences, however, that they were of a "very preliminary" nature.

Litvinoff, first of the Allied diplomats on the White House engagement list, spent less than half an hour with Mr. Roosevelt and departed without divulging to reporters any details of his call.

CITY AT PEAK OF CHRISTMAS BUYING SEASON

Merchants Anticipate Record as Mansfielders Go 'All-Out' In Purchases.

STILL THRONG STREETS

Postal Rush Continues But Mailings Indicate High Point Is Passed.

Crowding into gaily-decorated stores, Mansfielders and Ohioans went "all out" in their Christmas shopping this year, purchases far exceeding those of 1940 and even exceeding the 1929 business in defense manufacturing cities.

Merchants throughout the state reported heavy buying, and said customers are demanding higher priced quality goods than usual One retailer said that housewives are purchasing things that will last.

In Mansfield, merchants generally reported that Christmas business has been heavier than last year, and several predicted that final tabulation of sales would establish this as an all-time record holiday buying season. Business was particularly good in dry goods and department stores, in variety stores, and in furniture concerns.

It was only the stores handling items which have been restricted by defense needs for metals and other materials that have failed to share as heavily as other lines in Christmas buying

With only two shopping days remaining after today, shoppers crowded downtown streets today. Stores will remain open tonight and tomorrow night until 9 p. m., but will close at 6 p. m. on Christmas eve

The postoffice, as usual, was a scene of intense activity today. Postmaster H. E. Homberger reported that cancellations totalled 204,000 from Saturday to Monday morning, and that today they are beginning to show a slight decrease, indicating people have heeded requests to mail earlier this year.

MAPS STATIONS FOR ENLISTING

Civilian Defense Group To Set Up Enrollment Units In Industries.

The Mansfield civilian defense committee prepared today to establish enrollment stations at each large industrial plant in the city for citizens desiring to enlist for volunteer service in community defense activity.

Enrollments at the original six enlistment stations — the police headquarters, the four fire stations, and the Red Cross offices, totaled less than 400 during the first week that applications were received. More than 1,000 other application blanks were picked up by interested citizens, however, and 35 enrollments were received today

Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, chairman of the defense committee, expressed belief that establishment of five or six additional stations would do much toward accomplishing the committee's goal of enrolling every able-bodied man in the city.

A minimum quota of 525 has been set by the committee for work in auxiliary police, fire, and nurses aid units.

Pending establishment of the auxiliary police organization, on favorable action by city council on Mayor W. J. Locke's request for five additional policemen to guard the city's water distribution system, a patrol will be drawn from members of the American Legion to guard the water system

Well, Cards You Got Probably Were Ground Up By Train.

If you happen to be one of several hundred Mansfielders receiving some very dog-eared and dirty Christmas mail today or tomorrow, don't blame the postoffice or your local letter carrier for dropping his pouch in the dirt, but thank your lucky stars your mail was delivered.

Two mail sacks thrown from train No. 51 traveling east about 5 a. m. this morning, were not thrown clear of the Pennsylvania railroad mail car as it whizzed through Mansfield, and were chewed open by the wheels of the cars passing over them, spilling their contents on the roadbed.

Recovered by postal officials, one sack for Mansfield and one for the Erie depot, were brought to the postoffice, where they were marked "damaged by train at Mansfield" before delivery to their destinations.

Winter Arrives Like A Lamb As Mercury Mounts

Winter came today at 12:45 a. m. as mild as a lamb and Mansfielders enjoyed surprisingly high temperatures as the mercury continued an upward climb. The weather forecast calls for mild temperatures, cloudy skies and a possible touch of rain tonight and tomorrow.

Although the week-end temperature average was 32.2 degrees the mercury had already climbed to 48 degrees at noon today.

Highest mark reached Saturday was 28 degrees with a low of 19 yesterday morning. High yesterday was 41 degrees with a low of 34 this morning. No precipitation was recorded over the week-end.

Today is to be the shortest day of the year but, according to the almanac, it will be no shorter than any day from Dec. 19 through Christmas day. The sun rose this morning at 7:22 a. m. and is scheduled to set at 4:36 p. m., making the day eight hours and 14 minutes in length.

With the weather reports carrying not the slightest hint of snow, Mansfielders gradually became resigned to the possibility of a "green Christmas."

Heavy Fighting Raging Along Lingayen Gulf

Americans, Filipinos Resist Fiercely As Planes, Warships Escort 80 Troop-Bearing Craft To Coast; Battle Continues At Davao.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — The war department estimated today that from 80,000 to 100,000 Japanese troops, comprising six to eight divisions, were taking part in a new onslaught on the island of Luzon in the Philippines.

A communique reported heavy fighting on Lingayen gulf 150 miles north of Manila, where the Japanese are attempting a landing in force.

After a fleet of about 80 troopships under strong naval and air escort appeared off the Luzon west coast, a large number of 150-man barges attempting landings in the vicinity of Agoo, entered Lingayen gulf.

"Some of them succeeded in getting ashore," the communique said, adding that "the attempted invasion is being met with fierce resistance by American and Filipino troops."

Fighting was reported continuing near Davao on the island of Mindanao more than 500 miles south of Manila.

The communique, outlining the military situation as of 9:30 a. m. EST, said:

FLIGHT: Axis Forces Face Full-Scale Libya Disaster

BULLETIN

CAIRO—(AP)—The British announced today that their patrols entered Cirene and Appolonia, about 50 miles west of Derna, yesterday.

(By International News Service)

CAIRO—Axis forces, fleeing from hotly pursuing British Empire troops, and harassed constantly from the air, faced a full-scale disaster in Libya today. Scattered and literally disintegrating, the remnants of General Erwin Rommel's German and Italian Panzer divisions appeared to be trying to escape into Tripolitana, the western half of Mussolini's African empire.

At last accounts the enemy had been split into three forces, and too disorganized to be reassembled for an effective stand Rommel's forces were in two groups—one retreating down the coast road from Benghazi and the other scurrying across the interior road from Mekili. The Italians were straggling behind the more rapidly moving Germans, somewhere in the Jebel Akdar mountains northeast of Benghazi where they were being mopped up methodically.

The exact location of the British columns was not disclosed, but it was assumed they were making every effort to reach the Gulf of Sirte ahead of the retreating Germans and cut off their escape.

(A London report from Rome quoted Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist spokesman, as saying in his newspaper that not only the fate of Italy but the fate of the whole European war hinged on the Libyan campaign).

SCORE: More Than 14 Enemy Subs Bagged By U. S. Forces

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Announcement of the sinking or damaging of at least 14 enemy submarines in the Atlantic and several Japanese submarines in the Pacific was "good news" today to a capital that had just received navy department reports of enemy submarine activity off both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

The bag of an estimated total of 14 submarines in the Atlantic —undoubtedly German or Italian—may have shattered an "impending" Axis undersea offensive aimed at slicing the United States' vital supply and convoy routes, Secretary of Navy Frank Knox intimated.

He also said the navy had "effectively dealt with several Japanese submarines."

His statement outlined a new policy on reports of action against submarines. Heretofore, there have been no announcements of retaliatory moves by the U. S. Navy since President Roosevelt ordered it to shoot-on-sight the Axis "rattlesnakes." Henceforth, Knox said, he would give "general" summaries of the losses inflicted on the enemy.

The enemy losses revealed by Knox covered the period since the "shoot-on-sight" orders were issued on Sept. 11.

Earlier the navy department's communique No. 14 revealed that there were indications of "enemy submarine activity off the east coast" and reported details of the sinking of the S. S. Emidio and

Most of the bombs fell harmlessly in the harbor

The army announced that Nichols field was bombed.

General MacArthur's headquarters charged, for the first time, that the Japanese had attacked an open city from the air.

It announced that the Japanese bombed Baler, the birthplace of President Manuel Quezon on the east coast of Luzon, Sunday morning.

"Baler is an open city and there are absolutely no military objectives in that vicinity," the announcement said. "It was an inexcusable, unwarranted attack."

General MacArthur personally presented the distinguished service cross yesterday to Second Lieut. Jack K. D. Dale of Willoughby, Ohio, and Capt Jesus A. Villamor of the Philippine air corps, for daring exploits in the early days of the war. In all, 13 distinguished service crosses were awarded, three posthumously, but the other eight living recipients were on duty and could not attend the ceremony.

Defenders Still Hold Hongkong

LONDON—(UP)—Canadian, British and Indian troops held out still at Hongkong today in one of the most intrepid stands of the war.

Sir Mark Young, the governor, radioed that he had decided to remain at his post until he was taken prisoner.

Nothing had been heard from Hongkong for 24 hours until this morning when the garrison, standing off waves of attacking Japanese shock troops with machine guns and artillery, effected contact with Chungking, the temporary Chinese capital by radio.

In hourly messages after that, to 12:30 p. m. Chungking time (11:30 p. m. Sunday EST), Hongkong reported that it was resisting still, and gave the word that the governor would remain at his post.

Military experts familiar with the situation at Hongkong held out no hope that the little garrison would be able to hold out long against the overwhelming force of Japanese attacking by land, air and sea.

But it was believed here that the Japanese were suffering enormous casualties.

It was known that the defenses had been prepared so the Japanese would not know until they landed on Hongkong island just what they were up against.

Reinforcements Reported In Malaya

(By United Press)

SINGAPORE—Reports circulated today that reinforcements have started to arrive in Malaya but informed British quarters still regarded the situation on the northern front 300 miles above Singapore as verging on the critical

Imperial forces now hold a line running from Juala Kangsar, 15 miles directly northwest of Ipoh, to Kuala Krai in northern Kelantan, about 45 miles south of Kota Bharu.

The gradual withdrawal of British forces on both the northwest and northeast fronts was regarded as an ill omen despite the fact that the Japanese are said to be suffering heavy casualties, particularly in their push down the Perak river valley toward Kuala Kangsar.

There was no official confirmation of the reported arrival of reinforcements and none was expected until the government and military sources decide to issue a joint announcement.

Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, air chief marshal and imperial commander-in-chief, commenting on the strength of Malaya's defenses said that "if much needed equipment had come here, would Libya have been a success?"

ness research shows spending as high as 50 per cent ahead of 1940 in many cities as buyers, taking advantage of what may be the last year of full stocks for a long time, launched a buying wave brought on by fuller pocket books.

National defense centers such as Cleveland, Toledo, Columbus and Akron are witnessing the biggest buying sprees, and in some quarters sales are expected to break all previous records, including even the boom year of 1929, merchants predicted.

In Cincinnati, Christmas spending is 30 per cent ahead of 1940, and in Cleveland the figure is 25 per cent higher than a year ago. Retail sales are up 18 per cent in Columbus department stores, Youngstown shows an increase of 15 per cent, and in Toledo a sales volume of $180,000,000 is predicted.

Effects of defense work were strongest in Warren and Sandusky.

The Trumbull County Manufacturing association reported that the average increase in spending at Warren was 58.18 per cent over last year. Retailers said their business was double normal times. Warren not only felt the effect of steel mills operating at capacity, but also the nearby Ravenna shell-loading plant.

Sandusky, located near the Plum Brook ordnance plant, remembered 1929 as a comparatively minor boom.

That city of 26,000 population had a 1941 payroll of $26,000,000, compared to $10,000,000 in 1929 and four to five millions in past years. Employment swelled from 4,000 in 1929 to 7,000 in 1940, then to 17,000 this year.

Other defense cities, such as Lorain, Elyria, Lima, Springfield, showed increases in retail sales from 15 to 23.6 per cent.

In cities with few or no defense industries, such as Portsmouth and Athens, small general increases in business were reported.

Reports that the Germans were leaving Finland to its fate.

A United Press Malta dispatch which said it was believed there that Axis troops were filtering into French North Africa, that German war planes were being based there and that Axis troops were being sent to Tunisia and then relayed along the coast in small craft to Libya because the British navy had almost closed the Italy-Tripoli route.

A high diplomatic personality at Ankara was quoted by the United Press Cairo correspondent as emphasizing the possibility if not the probability of a German winter thrust through Spain and Spanish Morocco and French North Africa.

A United Press Stockholm dispatch quoted Berlin dispatches as forecasting the removal of Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the German high command; Gen. Alfred Jodl, chief of operations of the high command, who is usually at Hitler's headquarters, and Gen. Franz Halder, chief of staff of the high command.

In his order of the day to his armed forces, Hitler said he decided to assume supreme command because a spring offensive and other "initiative measures of warfare" were necessary immediately.

From the Baltic to the Spanish frontier, Hitler declared, the German front would be strengthened and protected.

Reds Advance Over Nazi Dead, Materiel

(By United Press)

WITH RED ARMY ON THE CENTRAL MOSCOW FRONT—Adolf Hitler's "six weeks' war" on Russia reached the end of its first six months today.

The Russians are advancing at from 10 to 12½ miles a day over a vast, horrible jumble of German bodies, German tanks, German transport vehicles, German guns, stretching back for 90 miles to Moscow.

Massed Russian forces are rolling forward irresistibly along the entire battle line. Russian tank and cavalry forces are slashing into the German flanks, stealing in silently from the woods to surround and wipe out German strongholds, gliding in suddenly to cut off highways.

And it is possible now to say that far in the German rear the Russian parachute corps, long held in reserve, is now in action.

For the second time within a week American and British correspondents have been brought to the battle field, to find the front widening and the Germans being pushed back at accelerated pace.

From the village of Azerskaya, 25 miles north of the capital, through Klin, recaptured Dec. 14 and on for 50 miles to the west they found a path cut through a vast wreckage of German military equipment.

Half buried in the snow lie 70-ton German tanks, great motor transports, field guns of all calibres. They clutter the roads and ditches and line the fringes of the woods.

London Says Hitler Provides Scapegoat

LONDON—(AP)—A foreign office commentator declared today Adolf Hitler "has found it expedient to provide a scapegoat for the fact that his 1941 campaign has not ended in the way he intended and the way he forecast it would."

Discussing the fuehrer's assumption of the German army command in place of Field Marshal General Walther von Brauchitsch, the commentator said Hitler had found that "scapegoat not among politicians but among soldiers."

"Hitler evidently is relying on the curious and rather mystic reputation which he hitherto has enjoyed in Germany as a means of restoring confidence and contentment of the German people and the German armed forces," he said.

The commentator said doubts over Hitler's instinct might arise reasonably from "the direction which the German army is moving, which certainly isn't eastward, and the unforunate things happening to one of his high-powered generals in Libya."

SELECTED FOR APPOINTMENTS

For the two youths who received the principal nominations, the announcement was the happiest news they could get. Both had been hoping for years for the appointments.

Richard had been talking about going to West Point since he was 11 years old, his parents said. The family visited the Academy six years ago, and after watching the cadets drill under a hot July sun for several hours Perez asked the boy if he was still interested.

"I'm still going to West Point," the boy replied. When he reached high school age, he selected his courses with the eventual appointment to West Point in mind. He graduated last June from Mansfield senior high school, and now is enrolled at Ohio State university, where he is taking subjects calculated to help him at West Point. He is an R. O. T. C. sergeant and a member of the Pershing Rifles. He has been a consistent honor student.

Charles graduated at the age of 16 from New Trier high school, Wilmette, Ill., where he was an honor student and an outstanding athlete, playing football and baseball. He is now attending Severn school, at Severna Park, Maryland, only a few miles from the Naval academy. At Severn, too, he has won scholastic honors and been active in sports.

In football, he has followed his father's example. His father was an All-American football center a little more than 20 years ago at Washington & Jefferson, where he played for three years after one year at Dartmouth. Following his graduation, he played professional football for nearly 10 years, traveling with the team on Sundays and working in the electrical appliance business during the week.

"But it was a dreadfully long time. The train must have been late tonight. Was it?"

"Um . . . No. I stopped by the shop a little time. You know how a big business man's mail piles up when he's away. Do you suppose Cassie will feed me? I'm hungry as a bear."

"If she doesn't, I will," Carol laughed happily.

* * *

While Andre ate his delayed supper, Amos lingered in his chair, smoking a cigar, and Carol sat with her chin resting on the palms of her hands, watching and listening. Even though Mrs. Steel asked her brother rather directly where he had been, he proved evasive, hinting that he was following up a new business deal It might be something; it might not. However, Aunt Cassie seemed to be in a forgiving state of mind, and retold her story of the new woman and the Hutchins house. Andre was duly intrigued by Elsie Smith's description of the newcomer.

"She doesn't sound quite like anybody in Jericho," he said as he stirred his second cup of coffee. "It looks to me, Cassandra, as if you might be in for some competition. I'll swear it's a new boarding house."

"Humph."

"I think, Amos," he continued, "you and I might drive out there of an evening and ask for rates. God forbid that we'd be interested, but it would serve as an excuse to meet the lady."

"You'd better make sure that's what she is . . . first," was Cassie's pointed answer. "If you've finished I'll take your dishes so's Elsie can get through."

When Andre went into the hall for his suitcase, Carol followed him.

"Can I talk to you for a few minutes?" she asked in a low voice.

"Sure. Come on up while I unpack."

Once in his room, he regarded Carol with his familiar twisted smile. But there was a worried look in his blue eyes. He thrust the suitcase in a corner and closed the door, then sat on the bed and motioned toward his one rocker.

"Sit down, ducklet. Is it secrets?"

"Yes."

"I wish I had my zither then."

"Why, Andy?"

"Because I've been talking to Chet. That's why I was late, mainly."

"Oh. Then you know . . . He told you."

"Like the gentleman that he is, yes. He didn't ask my blessing or anything of the sort, but he wanted me to know. So he said. He seemed very much concerned over the idea that he must have made himself look like an idiot in your eyes. But he stuck to his major premise . . . or whatever they call it."

"You mean . . . ?"

"I mean that he seems to be very deeply in love. Didn't he give you some such an impression?"

"He tiled to." Carol's lower lip quivered.

"And you didn't believe his story?"

"I couldn't, Andy. Of course I couldn't! Could I?"

"You women. I'm not holding any brief for Chet. But I can assure you that such things are possible with a man. I married your mother two weeks from the day I first saw her. You are very like her. I suppose I can understand the boy's feelings. But yours are something else again. And your secrets wouldn't include that."

"But I scarcely know him, Andy! I almost disliked him the first time I talked with him, but . . ."

"But you think you might like him well enough as a friend. Well, why not. If he's made of the right stuff, his ardor will cool none to quickly. I fancy he will make some woman happy in his day. He has a great deal to offer . . . in some ways at least. You may not be the woman. Let your heart decide that. I believe you have not seen him since?"

* * *

Carol shook her head despondently. It seemed to her that she could not look him in the face again, but Andy didn't know why.

"I gathered as much," her parent replied. "Chet's uneasy, but you've not finished with him, my dear. Unless you order him out when he shows up. And we can't very well forbid him Cassandra's house. I told him he'd better ask for me when he came next time. That will give you sort of a free hand. Will that help?"

"Maybe." Carol managed a mirthless smile. "I was going to ask your advice about it," she reminded. "About everything."

"God save us, ducklet! Didn't you hear what I've been saying? It's as near to advice as anything I can ever give you. If you decide you don't want any of the young men cluttering up the horizon, there's one old one who will be perfectly content to have his girl with him as long as she'll stay. I'm probably out of bounds, but may I set myself straight on one count?"

Carol nodded. She could not trust herself to speak for the moment.

"It's about Wige," Andy explained hesitatingly. "I haven't talked to him about anything. But I gather that he has eased himself out of the picture. Mind telling me? I can understand that, too."

There was no reply. Andy sighed. "I think," he said, "that perhaps you'd better come over here."

Carol was beside him instantly, her head buried on his shoulder, his arms holding her close.

"Sort of figured you needed a clearing-up spell," he said gently. "Take your time," he added as he felt her slim shoulders shake with vainly suppressed sobs.

After a short interval, Carol raised her tear-streaked face and smiled.

"Excuse me for sniffling." She dabbed at her eyes. "I was not crying about anybody . . . just so mixed-up . . . tired of thinking. I feel better now."

"Sure. I know."

"I'd like to run away from everything and everybody . . . but you. Just for a little while."

"Not a bad idea," Andy mused. "This slight break I had sort of cleared the atmosphere for me. Why don't you take a little trip?"

"Will you go with me?"

"Love to. A little later, maybe I've got some matters on hand that may take some time. But I believe a change would do you good. You can go wherever you want."

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1941.

Whatever price must be paid to save America is "reasonable."

What! Only TWO more shopping days until Christmas. My, how time flies.

Stockholm reports "mounting pessimism in civilian Germany"—and the prize joke contest which Goebbels launched is said to be lagging.

Money and Supplies Must Be Ready

WAR places new, urgent demands on the American Red Cross. When disaster strikes there is no time to collect money and supplies—relief must be immediate, so that suffering can be kept to a minimum.

When the call came from Hawaii and the Philippines $50,000 was cabled by the Red Cross to each of those chapters. Previously $25,000 had been sent to Hawaii and $50,000 to the Philippines, together with large stocks of clothing, medical supplies and 50-bed first aid stations—as a preparedness measure before the Japanese attack.

In addition to needs in many parts of the world it is now required that the Red Cross make ready for whatever emergency calls may be made upon it in our own country and, as a beginning, a national goal of $50,000,000 has been set—with $30,000 of this amount apportioned to Richland county.

This is aside from the recent membership rollcall, which provided for no more than ordinary needs, and the sooner the emergency quota is met the quicker Red Cross workers can devote attention to other duties—for solicitation, at the best, is not a pleasant task.

This campaign is reminiscent of similar ones conducted during the first World war, except that some of today's younger people have not yet become imbued with the spirit of liberal giving which marked the money-raising drives in 1917 and 1918.

But the actual danger to the United States is greater now than it was then and when the urgency of the need is better realized there will be no question about Mansfield and Richland county reaching the $30,000 quota.

Improvement In School Programs

SCHOOL Christmas programs seem to have changed for the better in the last few years. Instead of a long series of spoken pieces by individual boys and girls, there are more likely to be brief dramas in which a number of children act. No child is the "whole show," but all must do their parts well in order to make it good. Being one of a group helps to prevent self-consciousness and stiffness.

In thus promoting social teamwork, teachers have not lost sight of the value of speaking clearly and having as good a stage presence as an elementary pupil can have.

Choral recitations are another modern practice that many a parent hears with admiration that makes him wish there had been something of the sort when he was in school. Thirty first-graders, speaking in chorus, with such excellent enunciation and timing that the audience actually understands what they say, are a delight to both eye and ear.

Children are still children, despite educational changes. Some of them giggle and forget their lines. Some of them squirm, to the despair of parents and the amusement of others. But there is far less of this than there used to be, insists one old-timer, who doesn't think everything in the good old days was better than everything now.

More Race-Juggling By the Axis

ONE curious pronouncement is the recent statement in an Italian broadcast justifying Italy's alliance with Japan. That is all right, the broadcaster explained, and it doesn't violate Aryan principles, because both parties are "pure" races.

Anthropologists say there are no pure races, that all of our races have been mixed. As for "Aryan" ancestry, the word itself in ancient Sanskrit means "noble" but no definite race of "Aryans" has ever been found. If the term "Japanese Aryans" means anything at all, it can only mean that the Japanese are "noble." But like all the other races, they have various strains in them.

Most absurd of all, perhaps, is for Italians to pretend that they are a "pure" race. They have in them the blood of all the races that ever lived around the Mediterranean basin.

Growth In Hostel Movement

A HOSTELER used to be a person who kept a hostel or an inn. Today it refers to anyone who "goes hosteling" afoot or on bike in various parts of the country. Name and practice were borrowed from Europe where it has been the custom—perhaps discontinued since the war—for youth to take walking tours during vacations or on long week-ends.

The American hostel movement started in New England and has spread steadily westward. Hostel councils, usually composed of public-spirited citizens, work out the necessary regulations and raise the funds for operation. They provide the hostels, or stopping places, at comfortable intervals. Sometimes the hostel is a farm house where meals may be bought. Sometimes it is a lodging built for the hostelers and equipped with stove or fireplace for cooking. Hostelers carry knapsacks and whatever supples they need. The trails between hostels are kept as much as possible away from main highways, to avoid traffic hazards and to provide pleasant scenery for the walkers—or bicyclers.

Hosteling, says a Chicago member of the Great Lakes Regional Hostel Council, is one of the most useful recreational opportunities available today. It creates social unity and develops a counterbalance to the disintegrating and conflicting ideas that pull and haul at youth.

Medicine Becomes Sideline

A FACT that observation has disclosed, but which the U. S. census bureau now confirms, is that medicine has become a sideline in a majority of modern drug stores.

Bulked for the country as a whole, it is revealed that soda fountain service and sandwich trade take in twice as much money as prescriptions.

The number of drug stores with soda fountains and lunch counters increased between 1929 and 1939 by nearly 5,000 and their sales rose from $1,149,260,000 to $1,205,241,000.

Forty-two per cent of that sales volume was in meals, liquor and tobacco, and only 23 per cent in prescriptions.

THIS SEASON'S LETTER TO SANTA

Japs' Samurai Older Than History

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

TO FORGIVE the Germans for permitting Adolf to Nazify them is difficult. In fact, it's impossible right now. The Italians fell for Benito Mussplini somewhat more pardonably, though this isn't quite the right time to admit it.

For the manipulation of the Japanese it isn't easy to fix the responsibility upon any single individual Jap. They're dictated to by a comparatively small class, but by no particular one man, whom it's possible to identify unmistakably.

However, it's interesting to consider how Adolf got to be fuehrer and how Benito got to be duce and to wonder how the Jap samurai, the class referred to, got its start.

The Samurai far antedate both Adolf and Benito. They originated before the dawn of history, evolving themselves out of chaos. According to their own account. As between Adolf and Benito, Benito registered, as a duce, ahead of Adolf, as a fuehrer. Indeed, he patronized Adolf, as a freshman, when the latter was just introducing himself.

The last war's end found Italy in awful economic shape. Benito, then quite an ordinary but pretty prominent newspaper editor at Milan, initiated a campaign to improve the situation, creating the national Fascist organization to wage it with.

Either because he managed capably, or maybe solely by accident, things began to mend, which made Benito increasingly strong. Perhaps not altogether intentionally, in pushing a generally popular program he drifted pretty speedily into his dictatorial role.

Benito's Aims Were Good.

Anyway, Benito seems to have aimed originally at a fairly commendable objective.

Adolf was an authoritarian from the jump, as his book, "Mein Kampf," written before he took off, plainly indicated. That his purpose, at that stage of the game, was the socialization of Germany rather than conquest of the world is possible.

However, he was a born dictator, not a fluke. It was as a Nazi fuehrer that he appeared on the stage. At first he wasn't as absolute as he quickly become, but it was no process of evolution, as in Benito's case. He grabbed power as fast as he could.

Italy's declaration of war against the United States isn't regarded in Washington as of much consequence. The impression is that Benito declared it because Adolf told him to and he didn't dare to refuse. It isn't reckoned that he can do anything very formidable, anyway.

The Jap's Samurai, as observed above, manufactured themselves ages ago. They're not a society, like the Nazis and Fascists. They are Samurai by heredity. They swear by the spirit of Bushido, their patron saint or a kind of a god. To die for Japan is their creed, only they won't want to die without killing everybody else in sight first.

Of the trio—Adolf, Benito and Samurai aggregation—the Samurai are rated as most immediately dangerous to the United States.

Adolf is so fully occupied in Europe that it isn't believed he can do anything formidable elsewhere. Benito isn't deemed a serious consideration anywhere. The Japs, though, have demonstrated that they can raise a lot of extremely urgent Hades, and they're highly inconvenient to fight at such unavoidably long range.

They're not as scientific as the Germans, but their recklessness makes 'em indescribably vicious.

Some Trifles That Murder Sleep.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WINTER is the time for good sleeping and it is just too bad if you neglect all the knowledge that modern psychology has accumulated in order to get your proper rest.

The clinician can insist as much as he likes that sleep is not a necessity, but it still remains a fact that a bad night's sleep will knock out our sense of well-being for at least twenty-four hours. We should learn how to deal with the little disturbances of sleep.

You may have a spell of bad nights not because you have a conscience as uneasy as Macbeth's or because you are neurotic, but simply because you overlook one of the trifles that murder sleep.

How Senses Go to Sleep.

Our senses go to sleep in this order according to the psychologist: first we lose our sense of vision, then taste, then smell, hearing and touch. If this is true, and I think it is, we do not have to worry so much about the morning light as to be sure that no noises are likely to wake us up just at the moment that the organism is passing over into delicious sleep.

Touch is benumbed last of all, so be sure that nothing about the bed clothes or night dress is going to intrude through the sensory path of touch. Night garments which leave the shoulders exposed to the chill air make sleep lighter, because temperature sensitivity remains through practically all sleep.

Temperature of Bedroom.

Donald A. Laird of Colgate university, one of our most practical psychologists, says a bed can be too warm as well as too cold. Laboratory research suggests that the best bedroom temperature is between 50 and 60 degrees Fahrenheit.

The stomach does not sleep at all, it just rests slightly. Three or four times an hour it contracts spasmodically in what might be called hunger pang. These pangs start as soon as the stomach is empty—four to five hours after a meal—about the time adults go to bed. This suggests that a bedtime lunch of foods which will not cause digestive distress is helpful in improving sleep the first half of the night by postponing the hunger contractions.

Self-Hypnosis.

The worst enemy of sleep is residual excitement from the previous day and evening. We get too keyed up to relax. Walter Winchell once yearned to sleep as soundly at night as he did when it was time to get up. People who go to sleep well use what the psychologist calls self-hypnosis. Dr. Nathaniel Kleitman of the University of Chicago has found that the surest way to keep awake is to tense muscles.

Worry seldom keeps people awake.

Japanese Are Powerful In the Air, U.S. Has Superiority In Production

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Despite the current impression, U. S. military experts never have belittled Japanese air power. Claims that the Japs are poor flyers because of weak eyes were discounted by the war department as silly.

But despite the conceded potency of the present Japanese air forces and their initial successes, thanks to treacherous surprise, the Japanese are up against certain serious handicaps which in the long run should give the United States a big margin of air superiority.

Chief Japanese handicap is plane production, which we have the Japs licked a mile. Plane for plane, Japanese air strength now is about equal to ours. At the outset of the war they were credited with having 4,500 battle planes of various types, divided about evenly between their army and navy.

However, monthly Japanese war plane output is estimated at not over 500, compared to U. S. warplane production of over 1,500 a month, which is increasing rapidly.

Further, Japanese output is limited not only by lack of plant capacity but even more importantly by lack of essential metals, such as aluminum.

Second major Japanese weakness is in pilot strength. They are estimated to have begun the war with 5,000 combat pilots, 3,000 army and 2,000 navy. In this respect we also far outclass them.

The Japanese pilot training program, carried on in seven schools, turns out fewer than 1,000 fighting pilots a year. This is a pygmy rate compared to our training schedules.

* * *

Jap Planes.

PLANE for plane, some of the Japanese models compare favorably with the best we now have in the air, though not with the latest planes we have under construction.

For the excellence of their planes we can thank the appeasement policy which enabled them to buy plane designs and patent licenses from American and British firms, though the Japs also secured certain models from Germany and Italy.

The Jap Mitsubishi Mc-20 twin-motor bomber is a dead ringer for our crack Douglas DC-2. The Jap four-motor naval seaplane, the Kawanishi 4M, looks very much like the famous Consolidated PBY patrol bomber, one of which spotted the Bismarck and gave the alarm that led to its destruction.

The best Japanese pursuit plane, the 310-mile-an-hour Karigane, practically duplicates the Curtiss P-36, an early "Hawk" model, although the Karigane probably does not have retractable landing gear.

* * *

Government Reorganization.

THOSE far-reaching government reorganization powers given the president in the War Prosecution Act rushed through congress are not going to be wasted.

Nothing has been said about it but he has big plans up his sleeve for a sweeping reshuffling of government agencies.

Equally sensational is the man Roosevelt is considering to handle the job for him. He is Supreme Court Justice James Byrnes, who has been on the bench only a few months.

When he was in the senate, Byrnes was the outstanding congressional authority on government reorganization. He had studied the subject for years and was chairman of a special committee that drafted the reorganization bill that congress enacted some years ago. Byrnes' parliamentary astuteness also was largely responsible for the passage of the measure.

Byrnes will have to take a leave of absence from the court if he tackles the special job. The president believes that with Byrnes' knowledge and experience he can complete a report in a few months.

The president's plans include revamping of the hodge-podge of defense agencies, particularly those engaged in procurement. Inner circle advisers have long urged a consolidation of the numerous procurement agencies into a single, centralized body under one head.

Army and navy brasshats, jealous of their bureaucratic powers, have long vigorously opposed such streamlining. It remains to be seen whether even under war conditions the bureaucrats can block a long-overdue modernization of government purchasing machinery.

Note: If Byrnes undertakes the reorganization mission, he will be the second Supreme Court justice drafted by the president for war work. Justice Owen Roberts took a leave from the bench last week to head the special board investigating the Pearl Harbor attack.

Stellar Attraction.

HERBERT HOOVER is a former president of the United States. The senate banking committee is one of the most important on Capitol Hill. And the price control measure on which the committee is holding hearings is a war measure that directly affects every man, woman and child in the country.

But this combination of imposing circumstances was a complete bust as an attraction for drawing a crowd the day Hoover testified before the committee. Not even the full committee was present. The big marble-walled committee chamber was practically empty.

But a little way down the corridor another committee was performing to a packed house. The special senate committee investigating defense contracts had a witness before it who cast ex-President Hoover completely in the shade as a crowd drawer.

The stellar attraction was Tom Corcoran, ex-braintruster, who took the witness stand to hotly deny charges that he was a defense contract "broker."

The big throng that turned out to see the stocky, wavy-haired, trigger-witted New Dealer perform was not disappointed. "The Cork" put on a snappy show. He had a ready answer for all questions and blandly admitted that he rated himself and his legal services highly.

The thrill-hungry audience loved it and had a grand time. The show was better than any matinee running in the capital and didn't cost a cent.

Note: During Hoover's testimony before the banking committee, two visitors stuck their heads in the door and in a loud voice said, "Oh, pardon, we're looking for the Corcoran hearing."

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — It would be inconceivable in this war for the United States not to have sabotage and espionage, for those are twin activities considered vital to the effective operation of any war effort.

But the spy and saboteur are going to be up against something now with which they never had to cope in World war I—the most complete scientific crime laboratory in the world.

* * *

OVER at the Federal Bureau of Investigation, a group of 65 scientists, every one of them specialists, in some particular field, will be working day and night if necessary to make life hard for saboteurs and spies. J. Edgar Hoover, director, started the FBI crime detection laboratory in 1932, not without a little derisive sniffing from some government officials, lawmakers, and particularly the police of the land.

In nine years, the sniffers have quit it and the police of the land now send about 2,000 specimens a month to the laboratory for analysis and report.

Spectography, petrography, serology and such may just send the reader to the dictionary, but it already has been proved that they can send the saboteur to the pen.

Petrography, for example, is the business of analyzing and classifying soils, minerals, dirt and debris. Into this classification too falls the microscopic study of oils and greases to determine if any foreign substance has been introduced to damage the machinery it is supposed to lubricate.

* * *

ONE case where petrography played its part recently was the identification of iron filings in a big tractor that was shipped to Australia. After that, locating the source of the filings was up to other FBI investigators, but knowing what it was narrowed the search.

Not long ago, a navy experimental plane was discovered to have certain aluminum alloy fittings which had been partially sawed through. Into the laboratory came the fittings and 176 hacksaw blades and the scientists went to work. In a few days, they came up with the report that only 17 of the hacksaws could possibly have been used on the job. That didn't solve the case, but here again it narrowed the search to such extent that the agents in the field could work swiftly on what otherwise would have been a painfully slow investigation.

* * *

In the case of a train wreck, a rail had been twisted out of place and painted black so that it would reflect the engine headlight and reveal it was out of place. It was the FBI crime laboratory that analyzed the paint on that rail and found it to be identical with two jackets found hidden in a water hole nearly a quarter of a mile from the wreck.

If and when the owners of those jackets are apprehended, a powerful bit of testimony will be thrown into the case by the FBI scientist who made that analysis.

* * *

IN the laboratory, too, chemists study acids that are thrown on metals and materials to damage them.

The document section devotes its time to documents, checks, codes and cyphers. The search for fluorescent invisible writing, using ultraviolet light and the use of ultraviolet and infrared photography for the restoration of secret and obliterated writing are just phases of this section's extensive work but it is one that makes the task of sabotage and spying far more difficult than it was.

Life won't be as easy for inside workers as it was 20-odd years ago.

Pointed Paragraphs

A Farmer's Diary

A Soldier's Box

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

AS I APPROACHED a neighbor's farmhouse kitchen, I heard a woman's voice caroling a Christmas song. "Deck the hall with boughs of holly—tra, la, la, la, la, la, la." Her footsteps moved lightly about the kitchen, to the rhythm of the voice. Spicy smells came to my nostrils faintly. I stopped beside the woodshed, for a little, to listen longer...for spontaneous music, such as this seemed to be, is rare indeed. Cattle lowed humbly by the barnyard gate. Sheep came down from the hillside, with bits of snow upon their soiled dark coats. A gray-haired man, with a team, was hauling posts along the pasture. I knocked at the weather-beaten door.

The music stopped suddenly, and footsteps approached. Then the door swung open, my friend's wife recognized me, and invited me to enter.

"What smells so good?" I asked, for the odors of Christmas baking were everywhere.

Then I noticed, upon an old highchair, a box about two feet by eighteen inches, and a foot deep. It was partly full of gaily wrapped parcels, glass jars, and square containers.

"You've caught me right in the act of packing John's Christmas box," she said.

"You mean little Johnny?" I questioned.

"Yes—he was 'little Johnny' when you knew him last—he's more than six feet now and weighs 200 pounds. He's at Camp Shelby. We'd hoped he could get home, but he had a furlough just a while back, and now he thinks he'd better stay—especially since some of the rest are homesick and maybe need to get home more than he does.

"That's why I'm sending this box. I've tried to remember all the things he liked best—I've even made a gingerbread man, like I did when he was tiny. See—isn't it funny, with such a surprised, droll expression! Here's the spice cake—home-made candy—dried prunes from the trees he planted—apple tarts — honey from his own two hives of bees. I'm just afraid the box won't hold it all.

"The boys who stay will have a little celebration of their own, John says, in his letter. I know it'll taste better if he can share it with his friends. He's made so many fine friends down there, too."

I watched her pack more things into the box and saw how carefully she handled every little thing. It seemed that with each package was enclosed the heart throb of a great mother heart not only for her own fine lad, but for every lonely soldier this Christmas season.

She had no tears—but her face was lighted with a kind of radiance. It was as if she performed a rite for every home where Christmastime has a meaning. She rested the package, finished, upon the old high chair and marked it "NOT TO BE OPENED UNTIL CHRISTMAS."

Santa Claus came a little early for the boys at Camp Lee, Virginia. To the delight of the soldiers, Santa arrived, not in his traditional eight-reindeer sleigh, but in an army "jeep," as this picture proves.

Youthful Trainee Has Long List Of Accomplishments

ROLLA, Mo.—(INS)—Clayton Mitchell, 23, of San Francisco, a recent addition to the recreation department of Fort Leonard Wood's Engineer Replacement Training Center near Rolla, has acquired a formidable listing of accomplishments in the entertainment field.

Mitchell was a band leader at the age of 15. When he was 18, he had managed a Golden Gloves boxing champion.

Shortly before his induction into the service he was conducting what he calls an "electronic orchestra." He described the orchestra as a "complete departure from the present-day dance band, applying the principles of chemistry and physics to music."

Here's Five-Point Program To Develop Sense of Humor

(By International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD—Hal Peary, the radio comedian whose raucous laugh has netted him a four-figured salary in the movies, has a five-point program for developing a "sensayuma."

Peary, who plays Gildersleeve listed his platform for laughter as follows:

1. Look in mirrors. Don't just take a casual look. Do it the hard way. Squint at yourself. Look for that cavity in the back of your lower jaw. Twist your neck and see if you've still got a touch of summer tan on your shoulder. If you don't scare yourself, you'll start laughing. At least you'll stop taking yourself so seriously and realize that you're a very funny fellow.

2. Obey that impulse. You've always wanted to shake hands with the cop on the corner? Well don't think about it. Go ahead and shake hands. Stop worrying about whether that green and red tie is in the budget, or if it matches your hair. If you like it, go ahead and buy it. Do all the things you've always wanted to do. Stop fretting about little rules you never liked. (This does not include putting on ladies' hats at parties.)

3. Take time out to listen. Let the other fellow talk awhile. You've probably been making speeches so long without hearing the other guy that you've even convinced yourself that you're a bore.

4. Dress up. Make everyday a holiday. You may not bust out with a case of the giggles, but you'll be surprised how much better you feel with a flower in your buttonhole and your face washed clean.

5. Ring doorbells. Laughter is always more fun and more spontaneous when more than one person is doing it. Don't just sit and grimace at yourself. Get acquainted with your neighbors. You'll be sharing laughs you never thought you had in you. Remember a laugh is the only thing you can lose with profit.

WORK ANIMALS TO COME BACK

Dobbin and Old Gray Mare Take New Place In Defense Economy.

(By United Press)

CHICAGO — Dobbin and the Old Gray Mare have hit the comeback trail to alleviate the gasoline shortage and fill other transportation gaps in the defense economy.

Wayne Dinsmore, president of the Horse and Mule Association of America, predicted that the use of work animals, already stimulated by the defense program will receive such impetus from gasoline rationing that the declining horse and mule birth rate will be reversed.

"Rationing or higher prices for gasoline, difficulty in obtaining trucks, or truck parts, for rural or city use," Dinsmore said, "is likely to be felt in the horse and mule business."

He pointed out that defense stimulation of trucking already has resulted in the substitution of two teams for motor vehicles on short hauls in the Chicago "loop."

Dinsmore said an increasing number of horses and mules was expected in short haul work now being performed by trucks. He listed the army and an unusual increase in the demand for racing horses as other factors expected to augment the animal population.

He said the army purchased approximately 27,000 horses in the past 12 months, bringing the number to 41,000 with 9,000 remounts in reserve.

According to the association's records, the 1920 supply of these animals was 25,000,000 valued at $2,700,000,000. The 1930 population was only 19,000,000, valued at $1,400,000,000. By Jan. 1, 1941, the population had dropped to 14,500,000, valued at $1,100,000,000. Of the January stock, 10,300,000 wer horses and colts.

Dinsmore said that despite the increased need for horses, the average price received by farmers was only $69.80, compared to $74.50 in July, 1940. The average price from 1909 to 1914 was $136.60.

Dinsmore said the nation is producing only 8-13 of the horse colts necessary for replacements and only ¼ the necessary mule colts.

U. S. Training Pilots to Obtain Mastery of the Air

CALLING FOR 20,000 MEN EVERY MONTH

rogram Links With Events Leading Up To Nation's Entry In War.

By DEVON FRANCIS

NEW YORK—(Wide World)—ıe United States is launched on pilot training project intended timately to give it mastery of ıe air.

Whoever masters the air, acrding to the rule books of both e Axis and its allied opponents, is taken a long step toward orld military superiority.

The army air forces are callng for 20,000 men a month to ualify as aviation cadets. The ast announced objective of the avy was an output of 5,000 ilots annually. That has been oosted.

Just 15 months ago the the total ilitary pilot power of this coun- was only 8,300 men—counting my, navy and marine corps.

At more than 130 fields aviation dets are learning to fly. At ctical fields, to which they are ansferred when they win their ngs, they are learning to use rplanes as weapons.

Let's look at this stupendous inease in the pilot training proam as it is related by the caldar of events:

In 1936 the navy was turning t pilots at Pensacola, Fla., at rate of 250 a year.

In 1937 the lone advanced uning school run by the army corps graduated its largest ss, 184 men.

As late as Dec. 9, 1940, the navy nounced an objective of 800 idents a month by July, 1942. wanted a pool of 25,000 fliers by 5

By October, 1940, the army nted to commission 12,000 pi- a year Last March that was sted to 30,000 a year. In July ecame 40,000.

Today the sky is the limit. ıe navy has four huge schools operation. The army has upard of 70.

Find Glaring Lights Chief Cause Of Traffic Accidents

(By International News Service)

SAN FRANCISCO — Although two-thirds of the total motoring mileage is driven by daylight, more than three-fifths of all traffic accidents occur during the hours between dusk and dawn, according to the public safety department of the California State Automobile Association.

A leading cause of the high accident rate at night is the failure of many motorists to use the lower beams of their headlights when meeting other cars, an Automobile Association statement said.

A program of activities drawing attention to the glaring headlight menace is being carried on by the motoring organization and similar efforts are being made by affiliated A. A. A. clubs throughout the nation. Reviewing the reasons for the high rate of night accidents in proportion to volume of travel, the Association statement continued:

"The principal reason for this situation is the impaired visibility at night and the failure of a large number of motorists to give proper consideration to that fact. This is a point on which motorists might well take a lesson from aviators, who really understand and are alert to the dangers of limited visibility.

"Whenever an aviator finds his vision limited below a safe distance he begins immediately to take extra precautions. But many motorists continue to drive at unslackened speed even though they could not stop within the lighted distance ahead.

"When it is realized that an automobile traveling at 50 miles an hour can not be stopped in less than 160 feet under the best of conditions as to brakes, tires, road and weather, the danger of driving at that speed when visibility is limited to 150 feet is self-evident The peril to a glare-blinded driver is equally plain

"Lights should be kept in efficient condition and properly adjusted, and the lower beams should always be used when meeting oncoming traffic."

CHICAGO WANTED SUBWAY, NOW IT HAS BIG AIR-RAID SHELTER

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO—Chicago waited 40 years for a subway, built one in three years and, the day the Japanese blasted Pearl harbor, suddenly realized it had a $64,000,000 bomb-proof air raid shelter.

Subway construction began three years ago Priorities problems have slowed up the work in its late stages so that trains will not run before at least June 30, 1942.

The engineers meanwhile calculated the new system of 8¼ miles of underground tunnels, ventilated with the most modern equipment, could provide sleeping accommodations for about 130,000 persons in an all night air raid, with no trains running, of course.

Without bunks for sleepers, the air raid capacity of the subway would be more than doubled, the experts said, and probably the entire daytime population of the loop, workers and shoppers, could be housed underground for brief periods by utilizing the subway and sub-basements of downtown buildings.

Bomb protection would be provided by a layer of clay averaging 18 to 20 feet between the top of the subway tunnels and the surface The tubes themselves are encased with three-eighths-inch steel lining and two feet of reinforced concrete

Construction of the initial two-route system is 90 per cent complete. Equipping of the State street subway, to be placed in operation first, is 81 per cent complete. Yet to be started is the Congress street leg, a turn-around loop at the south end of the Dearborn street subway.

"I am a Grocer—"

"It is my business to give the people of this community the very best in food values, prompt service and courteous treatment. The selection of merchandise that goes on my shelves has a lot to do with my success, so I buy good products that are put up in accordance with well known standards of quality, weight and measure. Buying and selling on the basis of these standards protects my customers and my business.

"I know from experience that good newspaper advertising is the best way to tell people the news of my store. In my opinion, newspaper advertising is not only the most effective way for me to advertise, it is also the safest way. When I spend money in newspaper advertising I make my investment on the basis of verified circulation figures and values that are as well known and important in advertising as the standards of weight and quality that I use in my own business."

THE information which the grocer refers to is found in reports issued by the Audit Bureau of Circulations. This is a national, cooperative association of 2000 publishers, advertisers and advertising agencies. The work of the Bureau is to furnish advertisers with verified facts about the circulation of its publisher members.

The Bureau has a staff of skilled auditors who pay an annual visit to every publisher member and make a careful audit of the circulation records. Then, for the guidance of buyers of advertising space, the Bureau issues reports based on these audits.

These reports tell how much circulation a paper has, where this circulation goes, how it was obtained and many other facts. When advertising is bought on the basis of such information it becomes an investment in known values.

DEFENSE PEAK IN BIG PLANTS YEAR DISTANT

General Motors Spreads Its Vast Production Over Entire Country.

(By United Press)

DETROIT—General Motors corporation, the nation's biggest producer of automobiles and trucks, is speeding delivery of defense materials.

Its far-flung industrial empire, embracing 60 operating units from coast to coast, already has turned out $209,500,000 worth of defense goods ranging from tiny ball bearings to giant Diesel engines.

Output thus far, however, represents only the beginning. G. M. scarcely has scratched the surface of a huge backlog of defense orders and will not reach peak production until the last six months of 1942. It is building 14 new plants, some of which are completed, and enlarging 13 others.

Shipment of defense materials by General Motors through last June was composed chiefly of Allison liquid-cooled aircraft engines and parts, $60,900,000; military trucks and transport equipment, $45,400,000 and Diesel engines for the navy, $46,000,000.

Plants already have swung into production of machine guns, shells, instrument equipment and various other vital armament. Deliveries of defense materials by G. M. during the second quarter of 1941 were reported 70 per cent greater than the last three months of 1940.

Engineers also have found time to make improvements in 1,150-horsepower liquid-cooled engines, produced at the Allison division, Indianapolis, Ind. An additional 175 horsepower has been added to the engine, they said, without any increase in size. The engine now has 1,325 horsepower and weighs 1,303 pounds—a weight ratio of less than one pound per horsepower. These improvements, the engineers explained, make possible heavier armor, increased fire power, greater speed and climbing ability.

General Motor's Chevrolet and Buick divisions are preparing to build 2,000-horsepower, air-cooled Pratt & Whitney engines at Tonawanda and Buffalo, N. Y., and Melrose Park, Ill. Buick plants at Flint, Mich., will make parts for the engines, orders for which total $218,000,000. Approximately 25,000 men will be employed on the project.

Here's a glimpse of what other G. M. plants are doing for defense:

Fisher Body division will build parts and sub-assemblies for North American Aviation's B25-D bomber at its Memphis, Tenn., Detroit, and Muncie, Ind., plants. Peak employment at the plants will be 7,500.

The Olds Motor Works division, Lansing, Mich., is making shells under a $9,505,600 War Department order. It has 1,175 employes.

Participating in G. M.'s machine gun program are plants at Flint, Mich., Syracuse, N. Y., Dayton, O., and Saginaw, Mich. Fifty-two non-G. M. plants provide parts and raw materials for the guns.

Plants at Dayton, O., Lockport, N. Y., and Bristol, Conn., are contributing parts for army tanks.

G. M.'s diesel engine is produced by plants at Cleveland, La-Grange, Ill., Lockport, N. Y., Detroit, Pontiac, Mich., Harrison, N. J., and Flint.

Army trucks and transport equipment have been contributed by Chevrolet division plants at Atlanta, Baltimore, Bloomfield, N. J., Bay City, Mich., Detroit, Flint, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Mo., Janesville, Wis., Muncie, Ind., Norwood, O., Oakland, Cal., Saginew, Mich., St. Louis, Tarrytown, N. Y., and Toledo, O.

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—Several weeks before the war this writer cautioned that we might well expect to receive "token bombings" on our seaboard cities. I said then that the motive for such bombings would not be for any direct military effect or actual damage they would cause since, under any set of circumstances that we can reasonably imagine at this time, such damage would perforce be negligible. However, it was pointed out that the real danger would be the creation of a scare or panic which might result in a diversion of critical items, such as steel for bomb-proof shelters, anti-aircraft guns, fire fighting apparatus, etc., from our own armed forces and the lend-lease program to a needless and costly attempt to defend every city in the country from a practically non-existent threat.

Johnson

I have just talked with some experts who were on the Pacific coast at the time war was declared. They bring back some stories which are highly interesting and which I pass on to you for what they may be worth.

In the first place, it appears certain that Japanese planes definitely were over the coast of California, both north and south.

The northern ones were probably carrier-based, and the southern ones may have been based in Mexican lower California. Wherever these bases were they are apparently so far distant that no bombs could be carried (although some flares were dropped) but the very fact that the civilian population was thus rudely informed that Japanese planes could get to the coast at all seems to have had the desired effect.

Rumors and confusion were rampant. This confusion seems to have been added to, rather than alleviated, by certain Office of Civilian Defense officials who were fluttering around from town to town changing their minds and issuing conflicting orders at every stop. This is a condition which should be rectified at once and the necessary military orders issued. The conflicting and confusing scare stories which are appearing in the newspapers and needlessly riling everyone up should be discontinued by them on their own initiative. The president did a swell job in his talk on that subject.

The rumor-mongers had a field day. I got the following story from an eye-witness: In the midst of a blackout a man stood in front of a news stand shouting at the top of his voice that, "Thousands of Japanese planes are over Pasadena and heading for Los Angeles." An alert army officer got a cop and had this man arrested. The next day the owner of the news stand reported to army officials that the man was not an employe of his, and that he had never seen him before and had not seen him since.

This was no prankster. This is an obvious part of Hitler's technique of destroying public confidence and morale by stirring up scares.

We must not forget for one minute that the fifth-column of 1918 was a harmless infant compared to the ugly monster of 1941. In other words there's a lot more fire for the amount of smoke this time than there was last time.

This fire must be put out, but, just like the military job, it should be put out by experts. These experts should mobilize and train selected civilians to assist them in this field, but it should be done on a well organized scale and not on any haphazard, tale-bearing basis.

The tongue of the amateur G-man is probably even more dangerous than the loaded rifle of the untrained amateur soldier.

PILOT ESCAPES AS 'HELLDIVER' PLANE CRASHES

Bails Out When Tip of Wing Breaks Off Bomber During Test Flight.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — The Helldiver, Curtiss - Wright's experimental dive bomber which had been described as "the most deadly single engine combat plane," was a mass of wreckage today.

The Helldiver crashed Sunday morning during tests by Barton T. "Red" Hulse, 31, chief test pilot for the Curtiss-Wright Columbus plant. Hulse "bailed out" with his parachute and suffered a sprained left ankle and body bruises in landing. He did not require hospital treatment.

The Helldiver was one of two models being built at the Columbus plant for the navy. It had not been accepted by the navy but tests were almost completed.

J. A. Williams, general manager of the Columbus plant, said the plane was "performing heavy duty tests involving a new type of maneuver."

"A portion of an outer wing tip was lost during a maneuver in which an especially great stress was placed on the airplane, making it uncontrollable and making it necessary for the pilot to bail out," Williams said.

"It has been explained that the pilot was making a test in which loading conditions much greater than those which would be encountered in normal service were brought into play."

The Helldiver was a low-ring monoplane, of 1,700 horsepower and weighing 11,00 pounds which was understood to have greater speed and carry a greater bomb load than any plane of its type. How the crash will affect its production is up to the navy, according to a Curtiss-Wright spokesman.

The plane crashed four miles southeast of Reynoldsburg, about a mile south of state route 204. The wreckage did not burn.

WORKER HELD IN MYSTERY DEATH

Prosecutor Links Florida Slaying To Ohio Killing, Nabs Cincinnatian.

(By Associated Press)

BATAVIA, O.—With a suspect in jail, Clermont county authorities began today an effort to strip the mystery from the nine-month-old slaying of Herbert G. Beatty, 58, of Ashland, Ky.

Sheriff Thomas Brooks said he held a warrant charging Fred Arwood, 41, Cincinnati ironworker, with murder in connection with the slaying of Beatty, whose bullet-riddled body was found last March 24 four miles south of here.

Arwood was brought here late last night by Brooks. The suspect was arrested in a Cincinnati cafe, Patrolmen John Ritter and Peter Sheahan reported.

Ray Bradford, youthful Clermont county prosecutor, connected the crime with one in Florida while honeymooning there two weeks ago.

Florida highway patrolman Luther Daniel was killed near Miami, and Byrdl Hudgings, 22, indicted for first degree murder in the officer's slaying, said he purchased a 45-caliber revolver involved from Arwood in Cincinnati.

Two slugs from Beatty's body were from the same type of heavy revolver, and Bradford had his office send one of them to Florida where ballistics tests indicated the weapon at Miami marked slugs identically with those which killed Beatty, Brooks said.

Beatty, a native of Jackson, O., and salesman for a Birmingham, Ala., furniture company, left his Ashland, Ky., home March 11 for Cincinnati on a business trip and was last reported seen alive at West Union, O. His blood-spattered, bullet-perforated automobile was found parked on downtown Vine street in Cincinnati next day. A farmer found Beatty's body two weeks later.

AGED WITH MEAGER INCOMES WORTHY FOR YULE 'ADOPTION'

Old people trying to live on small pensions or dependant upon a meager income will face a lonely and cheerless Christmas unless some thoughtful and charitable person provides for them.

The case of an aged mother with an invalid daughter to support on a pension of $30 a month is only one of the more than 50 cases listed by the Give-a-Christmas files of the Community Fund as worthy of aid at Christmas.

Arrangements to adopt this family, Case 45, and also the others listed here may be made by telephoning the Community Fund office, 3599-6 not later than today.

CASE NO. 46

Here is a home which might well inspire a story or novel. A "death bed" promise exacted a half century ago chained a promising young girl to a half-mad sister. They have grown into old women, living in a miserable home. Their only income is a very small pension. Probably a basket is all that could be given here. They are very appreciative.

CASE 47

Here are two other sisters, both fine elderly women who once were accustomed to better things. Now they must live on a small pension, and try as they will there never is quite enough money even for the ordinary necessities.

CASE 48

The "tragic age" is that between the years when a man finds he is too old to work in private employment, and eligibility for Old Age pension. This old couple is in that age—just one year short of qualifying for Aid for the Aged. He had a little business of his own but is too old to follow it now.

CASE 49

An elderly couple and an invalid daughter living in impoverished circumstances. One child in an institution and the other taken into the service of his country. It is difficult for them to live on their small pension, while anything special for Christmas is out of the question.

CASE 50

It is a bitter pill for this elderly couple to accept charity; so great is his desire for self-support that when he is forced to return to organized relief he insists on working out his grocery orders. The minute he gets a temporary job he asks to be taken off relief. Not old enough for a pension.

Approximately 500 baskets will be distributed, Samuel Shapiro, personnel director, said although 175 of that number are no longer on the payroll because of seasonal production conditions and a priority curtailment of operations.

This year marks the first time the company has attempted a plant-wide gift distribution to all employes.

Laff-a-Day

"He thinks he has a D-A-T-E with me tonight, but I'm going out with J-I-M-M-Y instead!"

County officials and workers on the second floor of the courthouse are going to have less trouble keeping warm this winter. Workmen today were installing storm windows for second-story offices, but county commissioners said the other windows probably would have to wait until next year because of the cost of the work. C. L. Mitchell, chairman of the commissioners, said the storm windows and some other window repairs on the building would cost about $800. The double-thick windows are expected to make the building easier to heat and keep out soot and dust.

If any saboteurs plan to strike at the city's water supply, they had better make plans to carry a steam shovel in their pockets. City council has set up a program in which manholes in the Woodland reservoir will be covered with huge, wooden boxes filled to the brim with tons of slag and dirt. The boxes, city officials believe, will serve to slow down sabotage work so that a regular police patrol to be maintained there would be able to frustrate it before any serious damage could be done.

The young woman cashier was hurrying back to her job when she fell into step with two little, and not-too-well-dressed, chaps of about 10 or 11 years. Listening to their conversation, which she just supposed would be about Christmas, she heard one say to the other, "I'd like to buy a defense stamp. What can I buy one for?" "They cost a dime," replie dhis companion. "Aw, gee," exclaimed the first, "I've only got a penny."

Receipt of a Christmas present at this time of year is by no means novel, but Scout Executive Floyd Dent believes that the Boy Scouts of America have a Christmas present which can't be equalled. Dent said that plans are being made by local Scouts for a trip to the ranch, which is to be known as the Philmont Scout ranch.

RUSH STORES

Liquor Buyers Have Two Days Left For Holiday Supply.

The rear-guard of the annual Christmas shopping army — the hundreds of persons purchasing liquor for presents and for holiday refreshments — prepared to launch a three-day buying attack upon Mansfield's state liquor stores today.

Frank C. Poling, manager of the state liquor store on South Park street, reported that receipts show an increase of about ten per cent over 1940 already, with the Christmas rush still to be handled.

The liquor stores will be open from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. on Monday and Tuesday and from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. on Wednesday, according to Poling.

Following the Christmas celebration, hundreds will return to get supplies for New Year eve parties. Poling said that the same schedule of hours will be carried out next week with the stores remaining open from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. on Monday and Tuesday and from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. on New Year eve.

SET TO MARCH ON 3 OTHER COAST PLANTS

Navy Called To Prevent Work Stoppage In Jurisdictional Labor Dispute.

(By United Press)

SAN FRANCISCO — Soldiers with bayonets fixed and rifles loaded patroled one shipyard today and stood ready to march into three others to prevent a jurisdictional labor dispute halting $1,000,000,000 worth of vital construction.

They were stationed there to prevent intimidation of workers and to escort them through picket lines established by the United Brotherhood of Welders, Cutters and Helpers of America, an unaffiliated union, which called a strike of welders at all major California shipyards to enforce its demands upon the American Federation of Labor.

The union and army and navy officials disagreed on the number of strikers. Union officials said that more than 300 men had left their posts and more were coming out hourly. Government officials said less than 100 were out and company executives had assured them that the yards were operating normally.

The welders voted to picket the yards of Todd-California, Richmond Shipbuilding, Pacific Bridge company and Western Pipe and Steel company, where they claimed their members had been "locked out" because of AFL pressure. AFL unions hold closed shop contracts at the yards.

Police, fearing they might be unable to cope with the situation, asked Rear Admiral John Wills Greenslade, commandant of the 12th naval district, to provide troops to prevent riotous picket lines keeping men who wanted to work from doing so.

Within a few minutes after picket lines were established at the Alameda plant of the Pacific Bridge company, a detachment of marines appeared at the main gates.

The welders seek an autonomous union. They are now compelled, in industries which have the closed shop, to belong to the AFL affiliate which holds the closed shop contract. Some of the members of the unaffiliated welders' union have refused to pay dues to the AFL union to which they are required to belong. This has caused the union to require the employer to dismiss the workers, as, under the closed shop contracts, all employes must be members of that union in good standing.

Walk Out On Arms Job Because Of No Smoking Rule

DETROIT — (INS) — Approximately half of the night shift of 1,000 workers at the Chrysler tank arsenal left their jobs early today in protest against strict enforcement of a no smoking rule, but the day shift reported for work as usual and a Chrysler spokesman said production was interrupted.

The walkout came, it was reported, after several employes had been dismissed for smoking. Those who remained at work were men employed in final operations. Company executives and UAW-CIO representatives were expected to discuss the matter today.

A Chrysler spokesman branded the walkout as "wildcat" and said it was precipitated by "insubordination and flagrant violation of safety rules."

"Smoking," the spokesman said, "is prohibted in the arsenal for obvious reasons. And the men have been warned repeatedly against it."

In all, 170 youngsters ranging from pre-school age up to 12 years entered enthusiastically into the festivities began with the serious note of singing "The Star Spangled Banner" and pledging allegiance to the flag.

Program numbers included a rhumba by Doris Berno, Georgianna McClelland, Roa Anne Farry, Robert Shively, Jack Dickson and Wayne Strang; waltz clog, Sally Sowers, Nanette Griffith and Nancy Tucker, rhythm dance, Beverlyn Wynn and Barbara Foster, acrobatic routine by tiny Yvonne Beck; tap, Betty Miller; back-to-back tap, Georgiann Reynolds and Ralph Whipp; rhythm dance, Jack Dickson, and military tap, Stanley Hill, Georgiann McClellan and Wayne Spang.

Mrs. Walter Beckley, chairman of the affair, welcomed the children and grown-ups, and introduced Earl Salzgaber, junior past commander of McVey post, and Mrs. Vernon Caster, auxiliary president, who extended greetings in behalf of their respective organizations.

Climax of the entertainment came with the appearance of Santa Claus at the Christmas tree and the distribution of a treat to each child that included a big bag of candy, chocolate Santa Claus, bag of peanuts and box of animal crackers.

Mrs. Ruth Kahl, auxiliary child welfare chairman, assisted Mrs. Beckley in arrangements for the party.

Tonight the Legion auxiliary holds its annual Christmas party and exchange at the Legion home and tomorrow and Wednesday will assist the Legion in packing 35 Christmas baskets for ex-service men and their families.

Hall-Hazeltine Pupils Present Two Recitals

Pupils of the Hall-Hazeltine Studio were presented in two recitals during the past week. The first was a miscellaneous program of voice and piano numbers given by Frank Lane, Mary Ellen Shocker and Mary Betty Heiber; two-piano selections by Joan and Blanche Porter and by David Weimer and Lynn Decker; solos by Marjorie Bushnell, Louise Turner and Ann Wheatley. A Christmas party was held following the program and refreshments were served to the musicians and guests.

The Women's Club was the scene of the second recital which featured Dorothy Tingley and Frances Carter, contraltos, Geraldine Harley and Ada Mae Harbaugh, sopranos, and Louise Krause Peterson, pianist. Miss Harley's numbers were "The Star," by Rogers, "Ecstasy," by Rummell; "Devotions," by Strauss, and "Shoes," by Manning. For her first group of piano solos, Mrs. Peterson played "Sarabando" from Suite Six for Violincello by Bach, (Chiapusso); "Prelude and Fugue" from "The Well Tempered Clvichord No. 2," by Bach (Busoni).

Mrs. Tingley sang "Sapphic Ode," by Brahms; "At Parting," by Rogers; "Dedication," by Franz; and "American Lullaby," by Rich. Second performance of the evening by Mrs. Peterson consisted of "Sonata, Opus No. 14, No. 1," by Beethovan, in the three movements, Allegro, Allegretto and Rondo (Allegro Commodo.)

Miss Harbaugh then rendered "Deh Vieni Non Tardar," from the "Marriage of Figaro," by Mozart; "Allersellen," by Strauss; "The Maids of Cadiz," by Delibes; and "Those Memories Sweet," by Sandoval. Chopin's "Prelude, Op. 28, No. 17," opened Mrs. Peterson's concluding group of selections. She also played "Dr. Gradus Ad Parnassum" and the "Little Shepherd," from "The Children's Corner," by Debussy, and "Recuerdos," by J. Santos. Miss Carter sang of "Che Faro Senza Euridice," from "Orfeo and Euridice," by Gluck; "Spirit Flower," by Campbell-Tipton; "Estrellita," by Ponce; and "Cantique Noel," by Adam.

The program was brought to a close with the quartet's rendition of "Indian Lullaby," by Clark, with Mrs. Peterson as accompanist.

Mrs. Matthes Entertains Club

Luncheon was served at 1 o'clock when Mrs. Loren Matthes entertained members of the Social Crochet club at her home, 20 Fair street, recently. The long table was attractively decorated with tall tapers and Christmas appointments. All members were present.

A gift exchange was held during the afternoon and a social time was enjoyed. On Jan. 6, Mrs. Louis Zoller will be hostess to the club at her home, 38 Stewart avenue.

Elizabeth Burd And John Young Exchange Vows

In a double ring ceremony Dec. 20 in the parsonage of the United Brethren church, Mrs. Elizabeth Mae Burd became the bride of John Young. Rev. J. L. Boyer officiated at the quiet wedding which was solemnized before a few friends and relatives of the couple. The former Mrs. Burd is the daughter of Mrs. Frank De Nero, 359 Second avenue, and Mr. Young is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Steven Young of Delaware.

For her wedding the bride was attired in a powder blue crepe street length frock fashioned princess style. She wore black accessories and a shoulder corsage of gardenias. Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Harner attended the couple. Mrs. Harner wore a blue velvet street length frock with matching accessories and a corsage of pink rose buds.

Mrs. De Nero appeared at her daughters wedding in a black and white ensemble with black accessories and a shoulder corsage of pink rose buds. Mrs. Young was attired in a navy blue frock with black accessories and a corsage of rose buds. Following the ceremony a dinner was served to 30 guests at the home of the bride's parents. The long table was decorated with pink and white winter flowers and centered with a three tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bridal couple.

Mrs. Young is a graduate of the Utica Free Academy in Utica, N. Y. Mr. Young graduated from St. Joseph's high school in Crestline and is employed at the Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company. The couple is now on a wedding trip through New York and the New England states. For traveling the bride wore a navy blue tailored suit with red accessories.

Blue Wool For Winter Bride

By MARGARET KERNODLE
(AP Feature Service Writer)

NEW YORK—Here comes the Christmas bride of 1941—in blue. Yes, blue. And wool at that. Of course it's a winter ice blue. And the wool is as sheer as can be.

The heart-shaped neckline of her wedding gown is not so new, nor are the three-quarter sleeves. But that makes them smart.

The bride's bouquet is a modern fan formed, perhaps, as a timely version of a museum piece. (Museums are inspiring the designers these days.) Pale lavender and purple orchids fill the fan and create an effective cascade of color against the blue skirt of the gown.

For travel the bride will take an American Beauty frock of fitted rayon to wear under her fur coat. Beige will be her accessory color for the red frock.

ART CLUB.

Wednesday Art club members held their annual Christmas party recently at the home of Mrs. W. A. Fendrick, 419 West Fourth street. One guest, Mrs. Sarah May Bugg of Columbus, was in attendance. Mrs. B. F. Hagelbarger gave an interesting talk on "A Town Is Born." Mrs. W. E. Fendrick gave a short talk. During the afternoon baskets of food were prepared to be presented to needy Mansfield families. Mrs. E. T. S. Cliffe will be hostess for the January meeting of the club.

Christmas Party Held Sunday For Women of Moose

Mrs. Myrtle Clements and Mrs. Mabel Keller entertained members of the Ritual committee of the Women of the Moose with a Christmas party Sunday evening at the Clements home on Walker street. Twenty-four members and two guests, Miss Ruth Roesch, senior regent, and Mrs. Hazel Altman, publicity chairman, were in attendance.

Mrs. Keller, who is the committee chairman, presented each guest with a gift and her escorts gave her a gift. Dinner was served at a long table decorated with Christmas appointments and red and blue lighted tapers. Bingo was the diversion of the evening. A gift exchange was held and the group sang Christmas carols.

FRATERNITY PARTY.

Santa Claus was present to distribute toys and treats to approximately 11 school children who were guests at a yuletide party given at 7:30 o'clock Saturday evening by members of Phi Sigma Chi fraternity. The affair took place at the fraternity headquarters, 36½ North Main street. Rooms were attractively decorated in keeping with the season. Clifford Hagedorn, president, was in charge of arrangements.

Holiday Season Time To Spread Good Cheer

"At Christmas play and make good cheer
For Christmas comes but once a year."

Those words were written way back in the 16th Century but we still feel the same way about Christmas today. It is a time of gayety and happiness.

Sharing the hospitality of our homes with others is one of the loveliest ways of expressing the Christmas spirit. Dress the house with festoons of greens and holly, hang a wreath on the door to say Merry Christmas to all who cross your threshold and invite your friends to come join you for an evening.

Arrange a little Creche on a table or over the mantel in the living room so that all who see it will remember the little Christ Child who was born so long ago and yet is re-born in our hearts each year on December 25th.

Refreshments need not be extravagant and complicated affairs but should rather be on the simple side for your own peace of mind as hostess and the well being of the family pocketbook which has probably received a pretty good stretching during the holidays. Here are some suggested menus that may be of some help in your planning:

Luncheon: Cream of Mushroom Soup (canned), Christmas Star Salad, Chicken (or left-over turkey) Sandwiches on Enriched Bread, Cranberry Angels, Tea or Coffee.

Dinner: Cup Sonsomme (canned), Sweet Potato, Turkey Pie, Jellied Vegetable Salad, Enriched Bread or Rolls, Egg Nog Chiffon Pie, Tea or Coffee.

Late Supper: Christmas Star Salad, Cheese and Crackers, Tea or Coffee, Cranberry Sherbet.

These menus are all planned with economy and ease of preparation in mind. Several of the dishes are made with plain unflavored gelatine because that means they may be prepared early in the morning—or the evening before. They "cook" in the refrigerator leaving you free to do many other things. No last minute fussing either because all you have to do is turn them out of the molds and they are ready to serve.

Christmas Star Salad.
(Serves 6)

1 envelope plain unflavored gelatine
¼ cup cold water
2 cups canned or fresh tomatoes
½ bay leaf if desired
½ teaspoon salt
Stalk celery
Few grains cayenne or pepper
1 tablespoon mild vinegar or lemon juce
1 tablespoon onion juice

Mix tomatoes, bay leaf, salt, celery, cayenne or pepper. Simmer 10 minutes. Soften gelatine in cold water and dissolve in hot tomato juice. Strain. Add vinegar and onion juice (extracted by grating onion). Pour into star-shaped mold that has been rinsed in cold water first. Chill. When firm, unmold onto lettuce or watercress. Put a small ball of cream cheese and a stuffed olive in center of star. Serve with mayonnaise or desired dressing. Mixture may be poured into shallow pan about ½ inch deep. When firm, cut in stars, using a paper pattern and sharp knife.

Eggnog Chiffon Pie.
(Filling for one 10" pie)

1 envelope plain unflavored gelatine
¼ cup cold water
4 eggs
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup hot water
¼ cup rum or 2 teaspoons rum flavoring
1 teaspoon nutmeg

Beat egg yolks with ½ cup of the sugar and salt. Add hot water gradually and cook in double boiler until custard consistency, stirring constantly. Soften gelatine in cold water and dissolve in hot custard. Cool till luke warm, add rum and nutmeg. Cool until mixture begins to thicken. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites to which remaining ½ cup sugar has been added. Pour into baked pie shell or crumb crust and chill until firm. Just before serving, spread with whipped cream and sprinkle with nutmeg. Green tinted whipped cream may be put through pastry tube to form holly leaves on top of pie and centered with dots of red tinted whipped cream or cinnamon candies to form berries.

Cranberry Angels.

Cut angel food cake into slices, half to three-quarters inch thick, and two for each serving. Spread top of one slice with canned cranberry jelly which has been mashed with a fork, top with another slice and serve with whipped cream to which some of the cranberry jelly has been added. May be served with custard or foamy sauce if desired.

Sweet Potato-Turkey Pie.

Line sides and bottom of greased casserole with slices of cooked sweet potatoes. Fill with diced left-over turkey mixed with thickened gravy to which chopped pimento and sliced canned mushrooms have been added. Top with sliced sweet potatoes and bake in moderate oven about half an hour or until heated through. Diced chicken, veal or lamb may be used the same way.

Boy Feels Parents Went Back on Him

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My parents have threatened to put me out because of some unfair gossip they heard about me. I feel like a black sheep and as my relatives side with my parents, I can't turn to them for help. Even my grandparents, who really raised me, want me out of the house. I feel as if I'm only in the way.

A friend of mine has asked me to go away with him to seek a position in another state. I would like your advice about this, whether you think it is all right to leave home and find work elsewhere?

S. H. N.

If parents refuse to stand by a boy or girl in trouble, what can be expected when the worst happens. Granted this boy has been guilty of some fault which he denies, one would expect a more sensible reaction from his family.

The case of Dillinger stands for an all-time example. Distrusted by his family he became antisocial, though he had decent impulses which prevailed to his end. A petty offense, treated as if it were murder, is likely to turn a youngster into an out-and-out criminal if he feels his little world of parents, grandparents and friends is against him.

I hope this boy will not leave home and go to another state to seek his fortune anew, unless he has enough money in his pocket to keep out of trouble. It's so easy to break laws when one is cold, hungry and feels the weight of every man's hand against him. His family, which seems to have turned him down for a minor offense of which he claims to be innocent, may discover to their cost that the same lack of sympathy has led to graver wrongdoing. Please give this boy a chance.

* * *

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been invited to spend the week-end with my fiance's family, and the way I feel I'd rather go to jail. I understand they are higher in the social scale than we are, and I'm so afraid I'll do something wrong. But there's no alternative; I've got to go.

WORRIED.

Drop your worries. Nothing is more fatal than to attempt any new social experience with apprehension. Dress sensibly. You'll probably wear a tailored suit for traveling, and have something like a flowered georgette or silk for dinner. Take sensible shoes, if you're expected to walk; a pair of slippers for evening, a housecoat or becoming lounging robe.

If you smoke, for mercy's sake use an ash-tray, and don't burn the furniture with lighted cigarette stubs. If you're offered a cocktail or sherry, see that the stem of the glass is dry and won't cause rings when you set it down. If your fiancee's family is addicted to arguing on politics, religion or other things, don't try to convert them to your way of thinking—time enough for that later on, when you're a member of the clan. Be polite; good manners never fail.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"Why do you wish that?" I asked Mary, quietly enough, but I found my pulses leaping at something in her voice.

"I don't know," she answered, with a puzzled look in her eyes. "But I'd like to see it, nevertheless, if it's possible."

"Of course it's possible." I told her cordially. "If Father hasn't it with him, I can reconstruct every word of it from memory."

She gave a tiny sigh of relief. "Then I won't bother him by asking for it all," she said. "I'll get it from you afterwards."

"You may find that he will show it to you of his own volition, and ask you if you find anything suggestive in it." I said. "He is very keen about the importance of what you can remember of your old companionship with Mary, especially about this code business."

Spencer Arrives.

My father's knock put a period to my sentence. As I went to the door I saw Mary stiffen warily in her chair, for she, with the rest of the younger generation, stand in great awe of the Chief, although they love him dearly.

"Relax, child!" I whispered. "He isn't going to order the firing squad." My reward was a smile and a perceptible let down of her tension.

"Ah, Mary," my father said briskly when he had greeted me warmly. "Your Aunt Margaret tells me that you have remembered something of moment to us. Or"—looking from her to me—"was I mistaken in the identity of the memory to which you referred over the telephone a few moments ago?"

"No indeed." I assured him. "Mary has remembered what the 'something blue' means, and I am sure you will want to hear it."

Mary Repeats Her Story.

"Of course," he said, a bit impatiently. "That is why I am here. Just sit down here," he drew a chair opposite the one I had given him—"and tell me everything that you remember."

"There is so much that seems trivial." Mary hesitated. "Do you mean—"

"I mean every slightest thing that you can remember about Marion," my father interrupted. "I do not wish you to omit a single item, no matter how inconsequential it may seem to you. So please begin at the beginning."

"Very well," Mary said docilely, and forthwith told him the full story of the drama invented in the old summer house at Marvin, which she had just related to me.

My father listened attentively, asking no question, making no comment until she had finished.

Marion's Warning.

But when she had finished, he leaned forward and, with an enthusiasm I rarely have seen him display, he held out his hand to Mary and gave hers a comradely shake.

"Congratulations, my dear," he said. "You probably have saved Marion's life by your recognition of the message she was trying to convey by her request for 'something blue' to wear at her wedding."

He paused and looked out into space, a grim smile playing around his mouth.

"I do not think we should have turned over any information to them anyway, unless we first were in possession of Marion," he said, "but—one never can tell what might have happened, except for this warning.

Two Trails To Follow.

"We have two distinct lines of investigation now," he went on. "First to find out where Marion is and get her away; the second, to get the information concerning Jack Bickett's whereabouts, which the gangsters wish—"

"You mean!" Mary exclaimed horrified, then stopped short.

"No, I don't mean that the information will be given to the gangsters:" my father said, patently reining his impatience. "But we may be able to use it as bait, and besides, we want to find out where Jack is, for our own information and—his safety."

"If only Marion could know that we had received and understood her messages," I said.

No roweled colt ever flung up his head as quickly as Mary did hers.

"I think there may be a way to accomplish that," she said excitedly.

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, December 23.

A day of rather routine matters is read from the predominant planetary aspects. The stress will be laid on the social, domestic and sentimental associations and interests rather than business, which is under moderately adverse auspices. There is danger of loss, extravagance, unwarranted outlay as well as duplicity and imposition, arising from surprising sources. Be watchful in all relations, especially the purse strings.

Those whose birthday it is are under fair auguries in their domestic, social and affectional affiliations during the year, with pleasant cheerful and happy relations generally. But in business, finances and any sort of ambitious objectives there is little progress to be expected, as the outlay may exceed all incoming rewards. Also these are subject to trickiness and imposition arising from unexpected sources. Safeguard from overgenerous impulses, thus possibly averting some legal proceedings.

A child born on this day, while free, generous and well-meaning, will be unambitious and impractical, easily entangled in schemes and imposed upon.

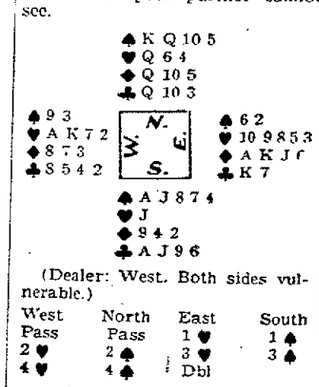
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

NOT A COME-ON SIGNAL

Ordinarily the play of some card which your partner can tell is not your smallest of the suit, when you are palpably not trying to influence the winning of the trick or force a high card from the declarer, is a message that you want your partner to lead the suit when he gets a chance. There are several times, however, when that is emphatically not the case. One of these is when it is impossible for your partner to lead that suit on his next turn, because you know he is out of cards in it, and he knows you know it. Another is when leading that suit would positively be to the declarer's advantage, no matter what cards you hold which your partner cannot see.



(Dealer: West. Both sides vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♥	1 ♠
2 ♥	2 ♠	3 ♥	3 ♠
4 ♥	4 ♠	Dbl

West won the first trick of this deal with his heart K. When East played the 10 on it, West repeated hearts with the A, which South ruffed. Two trump rounds, the heart Q for a diamond discard and the taking of the club finesse made the contract, with the loss of only one trick in hearts and two in diamonds.

After the deal East pointed out that his high heart on the first trick screamed for a shift to diamonds, that a small heart would have asked for a switch to clubs. That was because it should have been perfectly clear to West that South was blank in hearts after the first lead if West held four. East having bid the suit while vulnerable, with only small cards at its top, must have had at least five of them. Consequently, he could not be asking for a repeat of the suit.

* * *

Tomorrow's Problem.

(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

What is the best way for West to play this deal at 4-Spades, doubled by North, after North leads the heart K?

Typists Should Sit Tall and Avoid Fatigue

By MME. QUI VIVE

Do you thump the typewriter all day, lady? Do you, along about four o'clock, feel wilted and all tuckered out, wish you had some other job? That's because you are unmindful of posture, or possibly because you are saving up for some special luxury in the way of dry goods and didn't stoke up sufficiently at luncheon time.

You want to watch out for what is called chair-sitters' shape. You must keep the spine erect, if you would avoid that. You must find some sort of outdoor exercise in which to engage on your day off. We were designed for active lives and the musculature of the body must be kept conditioned. Many a woman with a young, slender figure who has taken a desk job has lost the slim lines after a few years, taken on weight.

Poor posture creates fatigue because the body is out of balance, breathing is restricted to the upper areas of the lungs, the internal organs go into a slump. Fatigue makes for inefficiency. A tired woman never does her work as quickly or as well as the one who feels highly energized, raring to go. The nervous system sets up a yowling, jumps at the sound of the telephone bell, and etches in frown lines. One should work restfully, not in a state of tension.

Keep one fact in mind: there should be an inward curve at the back of the waist. No need of keeping the torso rigid, though the chest should be held high, not allowed to slump. Endeavor not to throw the shoulders forward. Movements of arms and hands must be free. Stretching the arms up and down, or out from the sides will rest them, or even folding the hands tightly and swinging them at the sides of the chair.

A comfortable chair is important. Support at the waist line is a help. Sit far back. That habit makes for body balance. If you are short-legged, it may be necessary to have the chair legs shortened; if you are long-limbed a cushion will lift the body. Low-heeled shoes are as necessary for sitting as for walking. And don't overlook the need of plenty of drinking water, which is more refreshing, more necessary to health and well being than most of us realize.

Night and morning do bending exercises to ward off the midsection spread that is likely to come from any sedentary job. Hands on hips, bend from side to side. Then forward and back. But always at the hips, not at the waist line.

ONE ON THE HOUSE

INDIANAPOLIS —(AP)—Drunks feel right at home at police headquarters now. The new information desk Chief Michael F. Morrissey has installed in the record room is part of a bar seized in a raid on a club that sold liquor after hours.

EDUCATIONAL NOTE

ENID, Okla.—(AP)—Educational note issued by Fire Chief John Sweeney after his crew made two futile runs: "Fire alarm boxes are painted red. Postoffice boxes are painted an olive drab. There is no use of residents mistaking a fire alarm box for a mail box."

CHRISTMAS PARTY HONORS CHILDREN

Youngsters of Members of McVey Post, American Legion and Auxiliary, Attended By 170 Sunday Afternoon: Enjoyable Program Given.

THE annual Christmas party given for the children of McVey post, American Legion and its auxiliary, Sunday afternoon, brought approximately as many grown-ups to the affair as children.

In all, 170 youngsters ranging from pre-school age up to 12 years entered enthusiastically into the festivities began with the serious note of singing "The Star Spangled Banner" and pledging allegiance to the flag.

The main program feature was a 45-minute dance revue presented by students from the Marty Hogan Studio of Dance through the courtesy of Mrs. Hogan, whose husband was a member of McVey post.

Program numbers included a rhumba by Doris Berno, Georgianna McClelland, Roa Anne Farry, Robert Shively, Jack Dickson and Wayne Strang; waltz clog, Sally Sowers, Nanette Griffith and Nancy Tucker; rhythm dance, Beverlyn Wynn and Barbara Foster; acrobatic routine by tiny Yvonne Beck; tap, Betty Miller; back-to-back tap, Georgiann Reynolds and Ralph Whipp; rhythm dance, Jack Dickson, and military tap, Stanley Hill, Georgiann McClellan and Wayne Sprang.

Mrs. Walter Beckley, chairman of the affair, welcomed the children and grown-ups, and introduced Earl Saltzgaber, junior past commander of McVey post, and Mrs. Vernon Caster, auxiliary president, who extended greetings in behalf of their respective organizations.

Climax of the entertainment came with the appearance of Santa Claus at the Christmas tree and the distribution of a treat to each child that included a big bag of candy, chocolate Santa Claus, bag of peanuts and box of animal crackers.

Mrs Ruth Kahl, auxiliary child welfare chairman, assisted Mrs. Beckley in arrangements for the party.

Tonight the Legion auxiliary holds its annual Christmas party and exchange at the Legion home and tomorrow and Wednesday will assist the Legion in packing 35 Christmas baskets for ex-service men and their families.

Hall-Hazeltine Pupils Present Two Recitals

Pupils of the Hall-Hazeltine Studio were presented in two recitals during the past week. The first was a miscellaneous program of voice and piano numbers given by Frank Lane, Mary Ellen Shocker and Mary Betty Heiber; two-piano selections by Joan and Blanche Porter and by David Weimer and Lynn Decker; solos by Marjorie Bushnell, Louise Turner and Ann Wheatley. A Christmas party was held following the program and refreshments were served to the musicians and guests.

The Women's Club was the scene of the second recital which featured Dorothy Tingley and Frances Carter, contraltos, Geraldine Harley and Ada Mae Harbaugh, sopranos, and Louise Krause Peterson, pianist. Miss Harley's numbers were "The Star," by Rogers; "Ecstasy," by Rummell; "Devotions," by Strauss, and "Shoes," by Manning. For her first group of piano solos, Mrs. Peterson played "Sarabando" from Suite Six for Violincello by Bach, (Chiapusso); "Prelude and Fugue" from "The Well Tempered Clivichord No. 2," by Bach (Busoni).

Mrs. Tingley sang "Sapphic Ode," by Brahms; "At Parting," by Rogers; "Dedication," by Franz; and "American Lullaby," by Rich. Second performance of the evening by Mrs. Peterson consisted of "Sonata, Opus No. 14, No. 1," by Beethovan, in the three movements, Allegro, Allegretto and Rondo (Allegro Commodo.)

Miss Harbaugh then rendered "Deh Vieni Non Tardar," from the "Marriage of Figaro," by Mozart; "Allersellen," by Strauss; "The Maids of Cadiz" by Delibes, and "Those Memories Sweet," by Sandoval. Chopin's "Prelude, Op. 28, No. 17," opened Mrs. Peterson's concluding group of selections. She also played "Dr. Gradus Ad Parnassum" and the "Little Shepherd," from "The Children's Corner," by Debussy; and "Recuerdos," by J. Santos. Miss Carter sang of "Che Faro Senza Euridice," from "Orfeo and Euridice," by Gluck; "Spirit Flower," by Campbell-Tipton; "Estrellita," by Ponce, and "Cantique Noel," by Adam.

The program was brought to a close with the quartet's rendition of "Indian Lullaby" by Clark, with Mrs. Peterson as accompanist.

Mrs. Matthes Entertains Club

Luncheon was served at 1 o'clock when Mrs. Loren Matthes entertained members of the Social Crochet club at her home, 20 Fair street, recently. The long table was attractively decorated with tall tapers and Christmas appointments. All members were present.

A gift exchange was held during the afternoon and a social time was enjoyed. On Jan 6, Mrs. Louis Zoller will be hostess to the club at her home, 38 Stewart avenue.

Elizabeth Burd And John Young Exchange Vows

In a double ring ceremony Dec. 20 in the parsonage of the United Brethren church, Mrs. Elizabeth Mae Burd became the bride of John Young. Rev. J. L. Boyer officiated at the quiet wedding which was solemnized before a few friends and relatives of the couple. The former Mrs. Burd is the daughter of Mrs. Frank De Nero, 359 Second avenue, and Mr. Young is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Steven Young of Delaware.

For her wedding the bride was attired in a powder blue crepe street length frock fashioned princess style. She wore black accessories and a shoulder corsage of gardenias. Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Harner attended the couple. Mrs. Harner wore a blue velvet street length frock with matching accessories and a corsage of pink rose buds.

Mrs. De Nero appeared at her daughters wedding in a black and white ensemble with black accessories and a shoulder corsage of pink rose buds. Mrs. Young was attired in a navy blue frock with black accessories and a corsage of rose buds. Following the ceremony a dinner was served to 30 guests at the home of the bride's parents. The long table was decorated with pink and white winter flowers and centered with a three tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bridal couple.

Mrs. Young is a graduate of the Utica Free Academy in Utica, N. Y. Mr. Young graduated from St. Joseph's high school in Crestline and is employed at the Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company. The couple is now on a wedding trip through New York and the New England states. For traveling the bride wore a navy blue tailored suit with red accessories.

Young Married People's Class Gives Party

Twenty-four members of the Young Married People's class of the First Brethren church were present for a Christmas party in the church basement Saturday evening. Group singing of Christmas carols was enjoyed. Short business session was conducted by the president, Mrs. Lewis Cline.

Later in the evening, members had a gift exchange and refreshments were served at the conclusion of festivities. Committee in charge of arrangements was comprised of Mrs. Charles Craig, chairman, Mrs. Kenneth Galton, Mrs. Elmer Carrithers and Mrs. Howard Richards.

Blue Wool For Winter Bride

By MARGARET KERNODLE
(AP Feature Service Writer)

NEW YORK—Here comes the Christmas bride of 1941—in blue. Yes, blue. And wool at that. Of course it's a winter ice blue. And the wool is as sheer as can be.

The heart-shaped neckline of her wedding gown is not so new, nor are the three-quarter sleeves. But that makes them smart.

The bride's bouquet is a modern fan formed, perhaps, as a timely version of a museum piece. (Museums are inspiring the designers these days.) Pale lavender and purple orchids fill the fan and create an effective cascade of color against the blue skirt of the gown.

For travel the bride will take an American Beauty frock of fitted rayon to wear under her fur coat. Beige will be her accessory color for the red frock.

ART CLUB.

Wednesday Art club members held their annual Christmas party recently at the home of Mrs. W. A. Fendrick, 419 West Fourth street. One guest, Mrs. Sarah May Bugg of Columbus, was in attendance. Mrs. B. F. Hagelbarger gave an interesting talk on "A Town Is Born." Mrs. W. E. Fendrick gave a short talk. During the afternoon baskets of food were prepared to be presented to needy Mansfield families. Mrs. E. T. S Cliffe will be hostess for the January meeting of the club.

Christmas Party Held Sunday For Women of Moose

Mrs. Myrtle Clements and Mrs. Mabel Keller entertained members of the Ritual committee of the Women of the Moose with a Christmas party Sunday evening at the Clements home on Walker street. Twenty-four members and two guests, Miss Ruth Roesch, senior regent, and Mrs. Hazel Allman, publicity chairman, were in attendance.

Mrs. Keller, who is the committee chairman, presented each guest with a gift and her escorts gave her a gift. Dinner was served at a long table decorated with Christmas appointments and red and blue lighted tapers. Bingo was the diversion of the evening. A gift exchange was held and the group sang Christmas carols.

FRATERNITY PARTY.

Santa Claus was present to distribute toys and treats to approximately 11 school children who were guests at a yuletide party given at 7:30 o'clock Saturday evening by members of Phi Sigma Chi fraternity. The affair took place at the fraternity headquarters, 36½ North Main street. Rooms were attractively decorated in keeping with the season. Clifford Hagedorn, president, was in charge of arrangements.

Holiday Season Time To Spread Good Cheer

"At Christmas play and make good cheer
For Christmas comes but once a year."

Those words were written way back in the 16th Century but we still feel the same way about Christmas today. It is a time of gayety and happiness.

Sharing the hospitality of our homes with others is one of the loveliest ways of expressing the Christmas spirit. Dress the house with festoons of greens and holly, hang a wreath on the door to say Merry Christmas to all who cross your threshold and invite your friends to come join you for an evening.

Arrange a little Creche on a table or over the mantel in the living room so that all who see it will remember the little Christ Child who was born so long ago and yet is re-born in our hearts each year on December 25th.

Refreshments need not be extravagant and complicated affairs but should rather be on the simple side for your own peace of mind as hostess and the well being of the family pocketbook which has probably received a pretty good stretching during the holidays. Here are some suggested menus that may be of some help in your planning:

Luncheon: Cream of Mushroom Soup (canned), Christmas Star Salad, Chicken (or left-over turkey) Sandwiches on Enriched Bread, Cranberry Angels, Tea or Coffee.

Dinner: Cup Sonsomme (canned), Sweet Potato, Turkey Pie, Jellied Vegetable Salad, Enriched Bread or Rolls, Egg Nog Chiffon Pie, Tea or Coffee.

These menus are all planned with economy and ease of preparation in mind. Several of the dishes are made with plain unflavored gelatine because that means they may be prepared early in the morning—or the evening before. They "cook" in the refrigerator leaving you free to do many other things. No last minute fussing either because all you have to do is turn them out of the molds and they are ready to serve.

Christmas Star Salad.
(Serves 6)

1 envelope plain unflavored gelatine
¼ cup cold water
2 cups canned or fresh tomatoes
½ bay leaf if desired
½ teaspoon salt
Stalk celery
Few grains cayenne or pepper
1 tablespoon mild vinegar or lemon juice
1 tablespoon onion juice

Mix tomatoes, bay leaf, salt, celery, cayenne or pepper. Simmer 10 minutes. Soften gelatine in cold water and dissolve in hot tomato juice. Strain. Add vinegar and onion juice (extracted by grating onion). Pour into star-shaped mold that has been rinsed in cold water first. Chill. When firm, unmold onto lettuce or watercress. Put a small ball of cream cheese and a stuffed olive in center of star. Serve with mayonnaise or desired dressing. Mixture may be poured into shallow pan about ½ inch deep. When firm, cut in stars, using a paper pattern and sharp knife.

Eggnog Chiffon Pie.
(Filling for one 10" pie)

1 envelope plain unflavored gelatine
¼ cup cold water
4 eggs
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup hot water
¼ cup rum or 2 teaspoons rum flavoring
1 teaspoon nutmeg

Beat egg yolks with ½ cup of the sugar and salt. Add hot water gradually and cook in double boiler until custard consistency, stirring constantly. Soften gelatine in cold water and dissolve in hot custard. Cool till luke warm, add rum and nutmeg. Cool until mixture begins to thicken. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites to which remaining ½ cup sugar has been added. Pour into baked pie shell or crumb crust and chill until firm. Just before serving, spread with whipped cream and sprinkle with nutmeg. Green tinted whipped cream may be put through pastry tube to form holly leaves on top of pie and centered with dots of red tinted whipped cream or cinnamon candies to form berries.

Cranberry Angels.

Cut angel food cake into slices, half to three-quarters inch thick, and two for each serving. Spread top of one slice with canned cranberry jelly which has been mashed with a fork, top with another slice and serve with whipped cream to which some of the cranberry jelly has been added. May be served with custard or foamy sauce if desired.

Sweet Potato-Turkey Pie.

Line sides and bottom of greased casserole with slices of cooked sweet potatoes. Fill with diced left-over turkey mixed with thickened gravy to which chopped pimento and sliced canned mushrooms have been added. Top with sliced sweet potatoes and bake in moderate oven about half an hour or until heated through. Diced chicken, veal or lamb may be used the same way.

Boy Feels Parents Went Back on Him

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My parents have threatened to put me out because of some unfair gossip they heard about me. I feel like a black sheep and as my relatives side with my parents, I can't turn to them for help. Even my grandparents, who really raised me, want me out of the house. I feel as if I'm only in the way.

A friend of mine has asked me to go away with him to seek a position in another state. I would like your advice about this, whether you think it is all right to leave home and find work elsewhere?

S. H. N.

If parents refuse to stand by a boy or girl in trouble, what can be expected when the worst happens Granted this boy has been guilty of some fault which he denies, one would expect a more sensible reaction from his family.

The case of Dillinger stands for an all-time example. Distrusted by his family he became antisocial, though he had decent impulses which prevailed to his end. A petty offense, treated as if it were murder, is likely to turn a youngster into an out-and-out criminal if he feels his little world of parents, grandparents and friends is against him.

I hope this boy will not leave home and go to another state to seek his fortune anew, unless he has enough money in his pocket to keep out of trouble. It's so easy to break laws when one is cold, hungry and feels the weight of every man's hand against him. His family, which seems to have turned him down for a minor offense of which he claims to be innocent, may discover to their cost that the same lack of sympathy has led to graver wrongdoing. Please give this boy a chance.

* * *

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been invited to spend the week-end with my fiance's family, and the way I feel I'd rather go to jail. I understand they are higher in the social scale than we are, and I'm so afraid I'll do something wrong. But there's no alternative; I've got to go.

WORRIED.

Drop your worries. Nothing is more fatal than to attempt any new social experience with apprehension. Dress sensibly. You'll probably wear a tailored suit for traveling, and have something like a flowered georgette or silk for dinner. Take sensible shoes, if you're expected to walk; a pair of slippers for evening, a housecoat or becoming lounging robe.

If you smoke, for mercy's sake use an ash-tray, and don't burn the furniture with lighted cigarette stubs. If you're offered a cocktail or sherry, see that the stem of the glass is dry and won't cause rings when you set it down. If your fiancee's family is addicted to arguing on politics, religion or other things, don't try to convert them to your way of thinking—time enough for that later on, when you're a member of the clan. Be polite; good manners never fail.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"Why do you wish that?" I asked Mary, quietly enough, but I found my pulses leaping at something in her voice.

"I don't know," she answered, with a puzzled look in her eyes. "But I'd like to see it, nevertheless, if it's possible."

"Of course it's possible," I told her cordially. "If Father hasn't it with him, I can reconstruct every word of it from memory."

She gave a tiny sigh of relief. "Then I won't bother him by asking for it all," she said. "I'll get it from you afterwards."

"You may find that he will show it to you of his own volition, and ask you if you find anything suggestive in it," I said. "He is very keen about the importance of what you can remember of your old companionship with Mary, especially about this code business."

Spencer Arrives.

My father's knock put a period to my sentence. As I went to the door I saw Mary stiffen warily in her chair, for she, with the rest of the younger generation, stand in great awe of the Chief, although they love him dearly.

"Relax, child!" I whispered. "He isn't going to order the firing squad." My reward was a smile and a perceptible let down of her tension.

"Ah, Mary," my father said briskly when he had greeted me warmly. "Your Aunt Margaret tells me that you have remembered something of moment to us. Or"—looking from her to me—"was I mistaken in the identity of the memory to which you referred over the telephone a few moments ago?"

"No indeed," I assured him. "Mary has remembered what the 'something blue' means, and I am sure you will want to hear it."

Mary Repeats Her Story.

"Of course," he said, a bit impatiently. "That is why I am here. Just sit down here," he drew a chair opposite the one I had given him—"and tell me everything that you remember."

"There is so much that seems trivial," Mary hesitated. "Do you mean—"

"I mean every slightest thing that you can remember about Marion," my father interrupted. "I do not wish you to omit a single item, no matter how inconsequential it may seem to you. So please begin at the beginning."

"Very well," Mary said docilely, and forthwith told him the full story of the drama invented in the old summer house at Marvin, which she had just related to me.

My father listened attentively, asking no question, making no comment until she had finished.

Marion's Warning.

But when she had finished, he leaned forward and, with an enthusiasm I rarely have seen him display, he held out his hand to Mary and gave hers a comradely shake.

"Congratulations, my dear," he said. "You probably have saved Marion's life by your recognition of the message she was trying to convey by her request for 'something blue' to wear at her wedding."

He paused and looked out into space, a grim smile playing around his mouth.

"I do not think we should have turned over any information to them anyway, unless we first were in possession of Marion," he said, "but—one never can tell what might have happened, except for this warning.

Two Trails To Follow.

"We have two distinct lines of investigation now," he went on. "First to find out where Marion is and get her away; the second, to get the information concerning Jack Bickett's whereabouts, which the gangsters wish—"

"You mean!" Mary exclaimed horrified, then stopped short.

"No. I don't mean that the information will be given to the gangsters:" my father said, patently reining his impatience. "But we may be able to use it as bait, and besides, we want to find out where Jack is, for our own information and—his safety."

"If only Marion could know that we had received and understood her messages," I said.

No roweled colt ever flung up his head as quickly as Mary did hers.

"I think there may be a way to accomplish that," she said excitedly.

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, December 23.

A day of rather routine matters is read from the predominant planetary aspects. The stress will be laid on the social, domestic and sentimental associations and interests rather than business, which is under moderately adverse auspices. There is danger of loss, extravagance, unwarranted outlay as well as duplicity and imposition, arising from surprising sources. Be watchful in all relations, especially the purse strings.

Those whose birthday it is are under fair auguries in their domestic, social and affectional affiliations during the year, with pleasant cheerful and happy relations generally. But in business, finances and any sort of ambitious objectives there is little progress to be expected, as the outlay may exceed all incoming rewards. Also these are subject to trickiness and imposition arising from unexpected sources. Safeguard from overgenerous impulses, thus possibly averting some legal proceedings.

A child born on this day, while free, generous and well-meaning, will be unambitious and impractical, easily entangled in schemes and imposed upon.

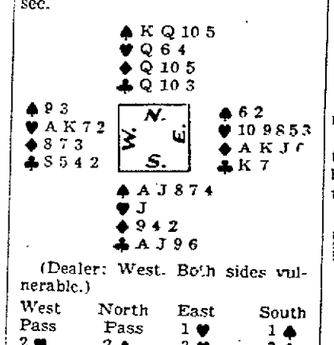
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

NOT A COME-ON SIGNAL

Ordinarily the play of some card which your partner can tell is not your smallest of the suit, when you are palpably not trying to influence the winning of the trick or force a high card from the declarer, is a message that you want your partner to lead the suit when he gets a chance. There are several times, however, when that is emphatically not the case. One of these is when it is impossible for your partner to lead that suit on his next turn, because you know he is out of cards in it, and he knows you know it. Another is when leading that suit would positively be to the declarer's advantage, no matter what cards you hold which your partner cannot see.



(Dealer: West. Both sides vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South

2 ♥	2 ♠	3 ♥	3 ♠
4 ♥	4 ♠	Dbl

West won the first trick of this deal with his heart K. When East played the 10 on it, West repeated hearts with the A, which South ruffed. Two trump rounds, the heart Q for a diamond discard and the taking of the club finesse made the contract, with the loss of only one trick in hearts and two in diamonds.

After the deal East pointed out that his high heart on the first trick screamed for a shift to diamonds, that a small heart would have asked for a switch to clubs. That was because it should have been perfectly clear to West that South was blank in hearts after the first lead if West held four. East having bid the suit while vulnerable, with only small cards at its top, must have had at least five of them. Consequently, he could not be asking for a repeat of the suit.

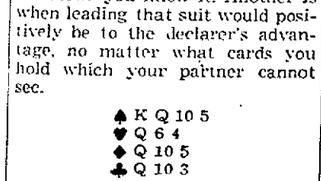
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

What is the best way for West to play this deal at 4-Spades, doubled by North, after North leads the heart K?

Typists Should Sit Tall and Avoid Fatigue

By MME. QUI VIVE

Do you thump the typewriter all day, lady? Do you, along about four o'clock, feel wilted and all tuckered out, wish you had some other job? That's because you are unmindful of posture, or possibly because you are saving up for some special luxury in the way of dry goods and didn't stoke up sufficiently at luncheon time.

You want to watch out for what is called chair-sitters' shape. You must keep the spine erect, if you would avoid that. You must find some sort of outdoor exercise in which to engage on your day off. We were designed for active lives and the musculature of the body must be kept conditioned. Many a woman with a young, slender figure who has taken a desk job has lost the slim lines after a few years, taken on weight.

Poor posture creates fatigue because the body is out of balance, breathing is restricted to the upper areas of the lungs, the internal organs go into a slump. Fatigue makes for inefficiency. A tired woman never does her work as quickly or as well as the one who feels highly energized, raring to go. The nervous system sets up a yowling, jumps at the sound of the telephone bell, and etches in frown lines. One should work restfully, not in a state of tension.

Keep one fact in mind: there should be an inward curve at the back of the waist. No need of keeping the torso rigid, though the chest should be held high, not allowed to slump. Endeavor not to throw the shoulders forward. Movements of arms and hands must be free. Stretching the arms up and down, or out from the sides will rest them, or even folding the hands tightly and swinging them at the sides of the chair.

A comfortable chair is important. Support at the waist line is a help. Sit far back. That habit makes for body balance. If you are short-legged, it may be necessary to have the chair legs shortened; if you are long-limbed a cushion will lift the body. Low-heeled shoes are as necessary for sitting as for walking. And don't overlook the need of plenty of drinking water, which is more refreshing, more necessary to health and well being than most of us realize.

Night and morning do bending exercises to ward off the midsection spread that is likely to come from any sedentary job. Hands on hips, bend from side to side. Then forward and back. But always at the hips, not at the waist line.

Pitt Victory Over Rams Called Year's Biggest Upset

Sport Podge by REX HESS

"I thought when we first planned this Eagles good will bowling tournament that all we'd have to do would be to send out posters and letters announcing the event, and then sit back and wait for the entries to pile in," declared enlightened Jim Orr yesterday.

"But I found out different. There was a lot of work, and a lot of traveling to do. I've been in every city, town, village and hamlet in the northern half of the state of Ohio in the past two weeks, and I've been so busy the last four days I haven't had time to call the paper and tell how we've been getting along.

* * *

"This week I plan to visit my store and get acquainted with the help again. I've been away that long.

"You know, I kinda hope there's been a Christmas rush going on at the store, but I wouldn't know. I've been so out of touch with the business world these past two weeks."

* * *

So that's what bowling will do to you,
"Let business go hang, I've work to do."

* * *

The Eagles had hoped for an entry list of 200 teams, and the 71 entries they brought in are a long way from the set goal. But it was a successful tournament.

The ground has been broken for a much bigger tournament next year. The Eagles found plenty of interest in the event, which was a revival of an old tournament plan which had died out in Ohio in recent years.

Possibly a little earlier date would be more successful in 1942. Late Christmas shoppers couldn't give up their last week-end of department store battles to make an assault on the inanimate maples.

* * *

That's a long way to go for three games of kegling and a Dutch lunch.

They tell me the Dutch lunch was worth the trip. I had a ticket but when they told me I'd have to climb four or five flights of stairs I gave up.

* * *

Rusty McBride is another guy who believes in conserving his energy. He was putting out just so much in this Eagles' tourney and no more. Three straight games of 182 he rolled.

* * *

Some backers of bowling teams go in for it for the publicity they may obtain, some just because they are good fellows and somebody asked them to back a team, and some, like Manager Coe of the Fostoria Red Flares in the N. C. O. league, because they get a kick out of standing on the firing line and cheering their keglers home.

Coe gives two bits to his bowlers for each strike in a league match. One of his heroes collected seven strikes in the first game against Bissman Birdie Brands yesterday. Coe didn't bother about the mathematics of the thing as he peeled off two bucks. "Here," says he, "you've earned it."

* * *

These bowlers are hard to convince.

Johnny Leppo had been striking right along yesterday afternoon until comes the fifth frame and the seven-pin stays up.

"His first good hit," chortles Goat Adens of Fostoria, "and he gets nine."

ROYAL CROWNS LOSE MATCH AT SHELBY

Royal Crown women bowlers were defeated by 167 pins in a special match at Shelby Saturday night, although Mary McMullen turned in high score of 531 and Thelma Linster was second with 515.

Panthers Cop Honor Handily

Texas Longhorns Offer Only Real Competition.

By ORLO ROBERTSON

NEW YORK —(AP)— Fordham's Rams were rolling along on the wave of five straight football victories. The Pittsburgh Panthers had received as many consecutive setbacks. Then came Nov. 8, a gloomy day indeed for the Rams, for the scoreboard read: Pittsburgh 13, Fordham 0.

Fordham snapped back to win its two remaining games and receive a bid to the Sugar Bowl while Pittsburgh went on to take two of its three other games. But the results of that Nov. 8 game goes down in the books as the biggest surprise of 1941.

* * *

Only the Texas football Longhorns offered the Panthers any serious opposition in the opinion of the 84 sports writers participating in the Associated Press poll. The Panthers rolled up 144 votes, 114 of which came from 38 first place tallies on the basis of three for first, two for second and one for third.

* * *

The Longhorns, a surprise winning, tying or losing, received 16 first place votes and a total of 94 points. Some of the writers just called Texas the surprise of the year, others mentioned the Longhorns 7-7 tie wth Baylor, their 14-7 defeat at the hands of Texas Christian and the 71-7 victory over Oregon in the final game of the season. One writer said Texas failure to play in any bowl was the biggest surprise.

Billy Conn had Joe Louis on the run for 12 rounds in their June title fight and then lost to the Brown Bomber in the 13th. For that gallant stand, the Pittsburg kid was rated third with 39 points, including four firsts. Bayview's unexpected victory in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap was good for 21 votes, two more than Vic Ghezzi received for his unexpected triumph in the P. G. A. championship tournament.

The ease with which the New York Yankees triumphed in the American League and the short work they made of the Brooklyn Dodgers in the World series, with the help of Mickey Owens' costly ninth-inning muff in the crucial fourth game, came in for 18 tallies.

The Yanks topped by three the collapse of the Stanford football team, after going unbeaten in 1940, and by four Buddy Baer's surprise showing against Louis in May in Washington. Winning of the National League pennant by the Brooklyn Dodgers also was considered a surprise by some writers, as were Attention's decision over Whirlaway in the Arlington classic and Red Cochrane's winning of the welterweight boxing crown by whipping Fritzie Zivic.

The voting:

	1sts	Pts
Pittsburgh's defeat of Fordham in football	38	144
Texas football team	16	94
Billy Conn's showing against Joe Louis	4	39
Bayview's Santa Anita handicap victory	3	21
Vic Ghezzi's P.G.A. triumph	3	19
New York Yankees (World Series and American league triumphs	2	18
Collapse of Stanford football team	2	15
Buddy Baer's showing against Joe Louis	0	14
Brooklyn's National League victory	2	12
Attention's defeat of Whirlaway in Arlington classic	2	11
Red Cochrane's winning of welterweight title	1	9
Collapse of Cincinnati Reds	1	8
Oregon State's football team	2	8
Green Bay's Nov 2 football victory over Bears	1	7
Lou Boudreau's appointment manager Cleveland Indians	1	6
Notre Dame football team	0	4
Market Wise's defeat of Whirlaway in Jockey Club gold cup	0	4

Three points each—Texas Aggies Southwest Conference football victory (1); Sacramento's loss of Pacific Coast league baseball title (1); Wisconsin's winning of N.C.A.A. basketball crown (1); Ted Williams' hitting .406 (1); Duquesne's undefeated football team (1); Army's tie with Notre Dame in football (1).

Two points each — Nebraska's football comeback against Iowa and Oklahoma, after losing five straight; Betty Jameson's early defeat in National Women's golf championship; St. Louis Cardinals; Lem Franklin's defeat of Abe Simon in three rounds; Alabama receiving bowl bid; Alsab; Joe DiMaggio's hitting streak; collapse of Cleveland Indians; Whirlaway's triumph in Kentucky Derby.

One vote each—Chicago Bears; tangle in Pacific coast baseball race; Lon Warneke's no-hit game against Reds; hole in one by Oscar Goess in New York World-Telegram tournament; 20th Century-Fox basketball team; Billy Soose's decision over Ken Overlin; Pittsburgh baseball Pirates; Harvard's football victory over Army; Wayne's score on last play of football game with Michigan State.

Bucketball Squads Tour

Nation's Teams Take To Road For Holidays.

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

NEW YORK—(AP)—This is the period of tinsel, holly wreaths, mistletoe—and traveling basketball teams.

Sam Barry's Hoosier-flavored Southern California squad leaves today for a cross country junket that winds up Saturday night in a meeting with Long Island university. From the southwest comes Rice, the Rocky Mauntain area contributes Colorado and Wyoming to the commuters, while Oregon State and Washington also head east. Ohio State goes west.

Cornell is all set for a holiday trip to the midwest, California entertains a barnstorming Missouri quintet tonight, Utah charges into the plains country, and Bradley Tech repays the compliment by visiting the mountains.

Those teams not learning their geography by the practical method will either cut short their Christmas vacations to resume drills or will remain intact for such tournaments as the annual Oklahoma City affair.

Early choice in the sooner joust, which gets underway Friday, are the West Texas State Giants, where each starter at least equals the 6-foot 4-inch height of Coach Al Baggett. Charles Halpert, center, is 6-foot-10 although Capt. Price Brookfield, a half-foot shorter, is the star.

REISER PICKED AS OUTSTANDING ROOKIE

CHICAGO —(AP)— Harod Pete Reiser, center fielder of the Brooklyn Dodgers, was named yesterday by the Chicago chapter of the Baseball Writers' association as the most valuable Major league rookie last season.

Reiser, of St. Louis, was given first place on all except one of the 17 ballots cast. Phil Rizzuto, Yankee shortstop, was the choice on the other ballot. Reiser will receive the J. Louis Comiskey plaque at a dinner Jan. 6.

Tygers Meet Collinwood

Shiplet Expected Back In Lineup Tomorrow.

Those rapidly improving Mansfield Tygers will go after their second victory of the season tomorrow night when they tangle with Cleveland Collinwood in their last pre-holiday bucketball game at the high school gym.

* * *

The Tygers began showing improvement in their third defeat of the season at Newark, came back to trounce Elyria for their first win, and last week led the powerful Canton McKinley Bulldogs for three quarters before losing Hahn and Dietzel on personals in the final period.

* * *

Jack Shiplet, forced out of the Canton game by a charley-horse, is expected back in the lineup tomorrow night to pair with Jim Robertson at the guard posts.

Dietzel will be at center and Winbigler and Hahn at the forward spots.

Athletic Director Harry Mehock scouted the Collinwood aggregation last Friday night, so the Tygers should be prepared for the Railroaders' offensive system.

DISCUSS RACING

COLUMBUS—(INS)—Ohio's harness racing outlook for 1942 will be discussed at the annual meeting of the District U. S. Trotting association in Columbus Jan. 14-15. The meeting will be part of the program of the annual convention of the Ohio Fair Managers' association.

City 'A' Loop Plays Tonight

Westinghouse Team Set To Sew Up First Place.

City "A" league cagers go into the last games of the first round of loop play tonight at Senior high school with the first place Westinghouse Electrics facing the Ohio Public Service squad and the two second place teams, Yunckers and Athletic Supplies, fighting it out for second place.

* * *

If the last place OPS team should upset Westinghouse the winner of the sporting goods house teams will be tied with the Electrics for first spot and a playoff for first round winner will be necessary.

* * *

However with Westinghouse displaying all kinds of basketball so far this season an upset appears unlikely. The Electrics have won all four of their games so far while the two sporting goods teams have dropped one each.

* * *

The third game of the evening will match two third-place teams when the Blue Goose Sohioans tangle with the City Newsies. Both teams have won one game and lost three so far.

* * *

Under terms of league play the winner of the first round will meet the winner of the second round at the close of the season for the championship.

First game starts at 7 p. m.

Westinghouse	4	0	1000
Yuncker	3	1	750
Athletics	3	1	750
Blue Goose	1	3	250
City News	1	3	250
Ohio Public Service	0	4	000

Banquet Tickets Sold Tomorrow

Tickets for The News-Journal's seventh annual football banquet Monday evening, Jan. 5, will be placed on sale at The News-Journal office tomorrow noon.

Members of the undefeated Mansfield high school football team will be the honored guests at the banquet, and principal speaker will be Coach Paul Brown of Ohio State university.

Coach Bud Houghton of Massillon will be present to show movies of the Mansfield-Massillon game.

Tickets will be $1.55, including tax.

Fabulous Bears Clip Giants And Face Breakup By Army

By STEVE SNIDER

CHICAGO—(AP)—With at least half their crack personnel facing an early call into American armed forces, the fabulous Chicago Bears prepared today for their last scheduled appearance as the unit that made the T formation famous.

Sixteen of the 33 men who contributed to the Bears' 37 to 9 victory over the New York Giants in a brilliant defense of their National league championship indicated they would not be with the Bears next season.

* * *

Thus would come to pass what every club in the league has been crying for during two hectic seasons—a "breakup of the Bears." Owner-Coach George Halas, who knit his superb material into the deadliest offensive squad in professional football history, scrambled until the early morning hours at the league's annual draft meeting to land prospective replacements for the 10 linemen and six backs he expects to lose.

* * *

Last appearance of the Bears will be in New York Jan. 4 against an all-league team selected by National league coaches and directed by stout Steve Owen of the Giants.

Owen had fair success in stopping the Bears yesterday but eventually suffered the same knockout blow that 11 of 12 previous foes had felt. His Giants, in fact, were on even terms as late as midway through the third period.

Then the roof fell in. Two long passes by Sid Luckman put hard-hitting Norm Standlee in position to score. Heroic running by Standlee and George (Golden Boy) McAfee carried 67 yards with Standlee plunging for the score.

Desperate after these thrusts the Giants made mistakes—a pass interference and a fumble—and each resulted in fourth period Bear touchdowns.

* * *

The playoff merely was an opportunity for more Bear records, nine of which already had been made during the regular season. They became the first team to win two straight titles since the playoff system went into effect in 1933. Bob Snyder's three field goals tied the playoff record held by another Bear, Jack Manders.

* * *

But the men who scored all Chicago touchdowns — Standlee (2), Ken Kavanaugh and George McAfee—are among the men who probably were facing their last league competition for the present. Other backs who soon may depart are Hugh Gallarneau, young Bussey, Gary Famiglietti, and Joe Maniaci.

Following the Buckeye defeat, Creighton went on to win the Missouri valley championship and runner-up honors in the national collegiate tournament. Eleven Buckeyes are making the trip to the coast.

BUFFALO FORCES BARONS BACK INTO 2ND PLACE

CLEVELAND - (INS)—A share of first place honors in the western division of American Hockey league proved only a fleeting thing for the Cleveland Barons today.

Ohioans Lose 13 Cage Tilts

Outstaters Wallop Buckeye Clubs Before Holidays.

By FRITZ HOWELL.

COLUMBUS—(AP)— The Christmas holidays come as a welcome respite to Ohio's college basketball teams, giving them a chance to patch up weak spots after being pushed around last week by out-of-state opponents.

The Buckeye contingent met 20 foreign foes last week, and the opposition walked off with 13 victories—giving the out-of-staters 23 wins against 22 losses for the season against Ohio squads.

This week's schedule calls for only four games, with only three of the Ohio teams seeing action. Ohio State plays Creighton tonight at Omaha, Neb., Tennessee invades Xavier tomorrow night, while Saturday calls for Ohio State at Sanford, and Cornell at Toledo.

As the boys paused to catch their breath after the three-week preliminary skirmishing, they took a look at the record and found that only nine of the 36 college teams had come through without defeat, and that nine had failed to win a single contest.

Heading the parade with five conquests was Toledo, followed by Akron and Dayton with four, Ohio Northern and Wooster with three, and De Sales, Capital, Mount Union and Ohio State with two each. Bowling Green, Kenyon, Ohio University, Baldwin Wallace and Wittenberg fell last week for the first time.

Big surprises of the week were once-mighty Ohio University's three straight setbacks at the hands of Mount Union, Akron and Youngstown.

Toledo, Ohio Northern and Baldwin Wallace are out front in ehe Ohio Conference race with two straight wins, followed by capital, Oberlin, Wooster and Bowling Green with one each. Eight teams have dropped league starts, while five others have played no conference games.

Murder Mystery.

"I Wake Up Screaming," spine-tingling mystery drama at the Madison, features Victor Mature, Carole Landis and Betty Grable in the story of a high-powered promotion scheme that is to launch a waitress as a cafe society glamor girl. About the time the scheme is ready to break the girl is murdered and the promoter is accused of the crime. William Gargan, Laird Cregar and Allyn Joslyn are among the players. "Riders of the Purple Sage," is the second feature.

Technicolor Drama.

"Blossoms in the Dust," starring Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon, is showing at the Ritz. A technicolor production, based on the story of a woman who founded a home for babies, the theater also features Roy Rogers in "Red River Valley."

There Are Two Goats Lost In This Short Story

Sergeant Cornelius P. Sullivan mopped his fevered brow.

The telephone bell rang and he reached for the receiver.

"Hello."

"Hello, is this the police?"

"Yes."

"Well, I've lost my goat."

"I'll lose mine if it gets much hotter."

"But I've lost my goat; I want you to find it."

"You'll get my goat."

"No, you get mine. I don't want your goat. I want mine.

"What's it look like."

"It's brown and white."

It was a genuine complaint from Willis Perkins, of Passway No. 1. He said his goat had been taken from his front lawn. Police sleuths tried in vain to find it.

Oulachons, small fish found only in Canadian waters off British Columbia, are sometimes called "candlefish" because of a candle-like brilliance after they have been dried.

Santa and the WHITE ROSE

by Sigrid Arne

THE STORY SO FAR: Princess Hildur has promised three wishes to three witches. Two witches have been caught by Carl, a peasant's son. Now the third witch is causing great trouble, but the King has a magic pipe which helps.

Chapter Nineteen

THE THIRD WITCH CASTS A SPELL

THIS is what had happened to bring the red flowers bursting forth from Santa's vine. Princess Hildur had made another wish. She had meant never to make another wish. But she did, at a ball.

She had grown into a beautiful young woman Many knights and nobles wanted to dance with her. She danced around the great ball room several times. But the thought of the third witch weighed so heavily on her mind that she slipped outside, alone, onto a balcony. She stood and thought about the years when she would be queen and she—yes, she wished—that there would be no third witch.

No sooner had she done it than she heard the witch's voice in her ear, saying, "That is my wish, and I wish to be free."

Hildur shivered and hurried to her room. She sat alone. The dance ended, and the castle grew quiet. Nothing happened all night. But when Hildur went down to breakfast she saw that a dust-covered man was talking to her father, the King, and the King looked very dismayed.

* * *

The man was saying, "Everywhere. Up and down the border. There seems to be no reason. Even the pastor at the Seven Gates can't reason with them.

"What is it?" asked Hildur.

"Child, it's war," said her father. "It has started along the border. Men on our side are fighting men on King Harald's side. I must go there."

The King hurried through breakfast and then he put on his coat of mail and, taking his spear, he walked into the court-yard. There stood Hildur, dressed like a young knight, holding her horse. She said, "Father, I will go with you. It's my fault. I'm sure the third witch is the cause of this war."

"Father, it's my fault. I will go with you."

"You mustn't go," said her father.

"Sire, one day I will be queen," said Hildur. "I must go."

"Yes, you are right, said her father. They mounted their horses and galloped toward the west and the war.

The same thing had happened in King Harald's castle. A dust-covered man had ridden into the castle yard at breakfast to warn of war. Carl volunteered to lead King Harald's men. Carl was thinking to himself, "This is more than war. It is the spell of the third witch. I wonder if I can find her."

* * *

Carl hurried into his suit of mail and buckled on his sword. As he did so King Harald lifted his favorite pipe down from the chimney.

"Sire, what are you thinking?" asked Carl.

"This," said the King, and as he spoke one of the little carved figures on the bowl of the pipe stepped out onto his hand. It was the sailor. "Good King," he said, "This witch fears water. She fears everything that is water-carried. She must be lured out onto it, and then she will lose her spell."

The tiny sailor bowed, and stepped back onto the bowl of the pipe and turned into wood again.

Carl puckered his face in thought. Then his face lit up. He said, "Sire, there is a broad river divides the two kingdoms. We must ride for that and see what can be seen."

King Harald looked less worried as he gazed at the tall, confident young man. He rose from his chair and the two walked out to the court yard to mount their horses. Suddenly Carl ran back into the castle. When he reappeared he had his quiver of arrows hanging over his shoulder. The two rode off to the war

TOMORROW: How the witch was trapped.

REAL HE-MAN MOVIE STYLE

This Fellow Trees 200-Pound Bear With Only a Flashlight.

ABERDEEN, Wash. —(AP)— On the way home from a movie with his girl, Jim Clark showed her what he-men are like.

He treed and shot a 200-pound bear that had roamed the outskirts of the city two months, robbing orchards and frightening housewives and children. They sighted him near a river bank. Clark jumped out of his car, waved a flashlight and the bear took to a tree.

Edith Olson rushed to Clark's home for a 12-gauge shotgun. One shot was enough. "Oh, yeah, a couple of times the bear started to come down," Clark boasted later, "But I just waved the flashlight and yelled, 'You stay up there,' and he stayed."

DEDUCE WHILE CROOK ESCAPES

Detectives Figure Out What Burglar Was Doing; Fails to Catch.

OKLAHOMA CITY —(AP)—Detectives Tom Guest and T. T. Hutchison didn't catch a crook with their deductions when sent to investigate a school robbery but they amused themselves no end.

Here's what they deduced:

Muddy footprints showed a prowler had climbed in a basement window. It was raining so he pulled a rocking chair close to a hot water heater, turned the gas up to drive the chill from his bones and settled down for a nap.

Just so he wouldn't oversleep he set an alarm clock on a nearby table for 2 a. m

BANKS FOR BONDS.

NEW YORK —(AP)— Banks which hold $10 in dimes and $8.75 in quarters are being offered for 10 cents at the 1100 odd branches of Bundles for Britain in the U. S. and American possessions. The $18.75 saved will buy a United States Defense Bond and the 10 cents, cost of the bank, will go toward relief of British civilians.

WESTINGHOUSE JOINS UPWARD STOCK CLIMB

Fractional Advance Spread Well Over List; Steel Held For War Use.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Fractional advances were fairly well spread over today's stock market but many leaders remained in the losing division.

Ahead at intervals were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Chesapeake & Ohio, Anaconda, American Smelting, United Aircraft, Westinghouse and Goodyear.

Market quarters scanned the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said that the reaction of ordinary steel consumers to a state of war was "distinctly helpful" and efforts to obtain the metal for non-essential purposes were virtually disappearing.

Curtailment of automobile and household appliance manufacture, it was added, has caused numerous steel users to cancel previous bookings in order that armament needs may be met more easily.

14 ENEMY SUBS BAGGED BY U. S.

Knox Reveals Attacks on Axis Undersea Craft In Both Atlantic, Pacific Oceans.

Knox's announcement did not identify the 14 submarines believed to have been sunk or damaged in the Atlantic. Most of them presumably were German undersea raiders, although Italy has boasted that her submarines are in action in the North Atlantic, operating from channel coast bases.

Naval analysts believed the Japanese submarines which Knox said had been "effectively dealt with" in the Pacific may have been several of the 40 to 50 long-range subs which the Japanese are believed to have in their fleet of 80 to 100 undersea craft.

The navy has been aware for some time that enemy submarine activity in the near American waters was "impending," Knox said.
